

PEP: New hotel would be win for Powell and beyond

BY MIKE BUHLER
Tribune Community Editor

Powell would not be the only winner if a planned hotel and publicly-owned conference center come to fruition in the next two years.

That is what Christine Bekes, executive director of the Powell Economic Partnership, told those in attendance at Tuesday's meeting of the PEP Advisory Board at Northwest College's West Campus.

"The win is for Powell, but it's definitely for Park County and the Big Horn Basin — especially around the workforce training opportunities that are in the developing stages with Northwest College — and then the State of Wyoming as it looks to grow and enhance our tourism industry," Bekes said.

Billings developer Steve

Wahrlich also spoke at Tuesday's meeting about the public-private partnership that would make the hotel and conference center unique. Wahrlich said the hotel and conference center would be operated by the same private entity, but that the conference center would be publicly owned.

That topic will be foremost when the Powell City Council meets on Monday to consider applying for a "community readiness" grant of up to $3 million from the state. That grant program is administered by the Wyoming Business Council.

Wahrlich said all the public money that would go into the construction of the conference center would ultimately be recaptured by the city and the state — with the majority recaptured by the City of Powell for

Program available weekdays in June and July Free summer lunches available to area children

BY CJ BAKER

Thanks to a new partnership between federal, state and local governments, area children will be able to receive free lunches throughout June and July.

Starting Monday and continuing through July 27, Powell Valley Healthcare will be providing sack lunches at the Homestead Park warming house/baseball concessions building from noon to 1 p.m. on weekdays.

"It's primarily for underserved children in Powell, ... but it's open to all children," said Powell Valley Healthcare CEO Terry Odom, who expects roughly 200 kids will be fed each day.

The free lunches are part of a federally funded/Wyoming Department of Education-run effort called the Summer Food Service Program. It basically

Two Crandall area cabins suffered severe damage after being hit by mudslides in recent days.

The cabins are located off Park County Road XUX — also known as the Squaw Creek Road — on chunks of private property within the Shoshone National Forest. The road has been temporarily closed to travel, as parts of the route are slipping away or are covered in feet of wet mud and debris.

When Charlie Cooley arrived at his cabin around 7:30 a.m. Sunday, the road was still passable and "it wasn't that bad," he said. But he soon heard something coming down the hillside.

"We could hear all the breaking trees and just kind of these huge thumping noises — which ultimately ended up being rocks and stuff falling off the top [of the mountain]," Cooley said.

He backed up his truck to get out of the slide path — not too long before a roughly 40-foot-wide muddy slurry arrived, carrying tree trunks and rocks. One wing of the cabin was torn away from the rest of the structure. "It was just real slow-moving and then just kind of broke loose and really took to raging down the side of it for sure," said Cooley, who lives in Cowley. He fears the cabin — which he and his wife bought from his grandmother a year and a half ago — could be a total loss.

"It's definitely not good," he said Tuesday.

A neighboring cabin, owned by Ardell Smith of Powell, has also suffered substantial damage. That cabin had been rebuilt in 2013, after a fatal fire claimed the previous structure a few years earlier.

Power and phone service to the area has also been disrupted.

Cooley had driven to his cabin on Sunday thinking he might be able to bring an excavator and cut a trench to divert the slide.

But, "to see the magnitude of it, there's just no way. There's nothing you could do about it," he said, adding, "The power of that's not anything an excavator could fix."

Park County Engineer Brian Edwards said the county's road

Persistent mudslides near East Gate slow traffic

Wyoming Department of Transportation maintenance crews have been kept busy this week clearing mud and debris from U.S. Highway 14/16/20, about a mile east of the East Entrance to Yellowstone Park.

The highway drainage works known as Unnamed Draw has experienced three mudslides since Sunday, partially closing the highway on two occasions. WYDOT workers were able to maintain one lane of travel to funnel traffic between the East Gate and Cody.

The first closure occurred about 1:30 p.m. Sunday with rocks, mud and trees pouring down the draw. Another mudslide followed sometime during the nighttime hours of Monday. More sliding activity on Tuesday plugged the area under the bridge, forcing water into the highway borrow pit. Maintenance crews used a backhoe to open drainage to allow water to go under the road and reach the Shoshone River.

WYDOT maintenance crews work on the area nearly every year as part of their normal spring/early summer maintenance. Some debris, mud and water flow under the bridge on an annual basis.

No road damage or bridge damage has been registered in the mudslides since the Memorial Day weekend.

In Cody, Cheney reflects on 9/11

BY MIKE BUHLER
Tribune Community Editor

Former Vice President Dick Cheney reflected on a long political career while heading the Park County Republican Party's Lincoln Day Dinner in Cody. But one day stood out above all others: Sept. 11, 2001.

"9/11's one of those days that everybody remembers," Cheney told those in attendance. "Everybody pretty well knows where they were at that time, whether it was home, going to school or going to work."

Cheney was in his office in the West Wing of the White House when he found out that two airplanes hit the World Trade Center towers in New York.

"After I'd been there for a short period of time, people started to gather in my office," he said. "Condi Rice, the National Security Adviser, came in and Josh Bolten, who later became Chief of Staff, came in. We had eight to 10 people there and all of a sudden, the door burst open and it was one of my Secret Service agents. He came around behind my desk, put his right hand on the back of my belt and his left hand on my left shoulder, lifted me out of the chair and propelled me out of the office — obviously something they'd practiced."

After a third airplane hit the Pentagon, the vice president later heard that another airplane was headed for the White House.

Powell population flat

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

People came and left, were born and died, but in the end, Powell's population stayed just about the same last year.

Between July 2016 and July 2017, the U.S. Census Bureau figures that Powell grew by two residents, for a new population of 6,440.

According to estimates released Thursday, Powell remains Wyoming's 15th-largest city. It's sandwiched between Torrington (pop. 6,691) and Douglas (6,350).

Cody, meanwhile, ranked as one of the fastest-growing cities in the state. Between 2016 and 2017, Cody is believed to have added 49 residents and grown by 0.5 percent. That puts the city's new estimated population at 9,885, maintaining its position as the state's 11th-largest.

However, Cody's growth paled in comparison in rural Park County, where the population is growing the fastest.

According to the Census Bureau's calculations, there were 12,888 people living in the county last year — up by 104 residents (0.8 percent) from 2016.

As for Meeteetse and Franconie, the new estimates put their populations at 335 and 158, respectively.

Overall, Park County is estimated to have added 156 residents for a new population of 29,110 (up 0.5 percent). That bucked the statewide trend, as Wyoming's overall population fell by 2.8 percent. It was the biggest drop since 1989; Wenlin Liu, chief economist for the State of Wyoming's Economic Analysis Division, attributed the change to a downturn in the energy industry and workers leaving to look for jobs in other states.

Some cities were hit particularly hard.

Between people moving away and deaths, Gillette lost 1,730 people — or 5.4 percent of its residents — while Casper also kept shrinking, losing nearly 1,100 people last year.

More than two-thirds of Wyomingites lived in a town or city as of last year, with close to half of the state's population (more than 47 percent) residing in the 10 largest cities.

Park County Search and Rescue member dies in kayaking accident

A 20-year veteran of Park County Search and Rescue died while kayaking south of Red Lodge on Sunday afternoon.

Ed Conning, of Cody, was 65.

The experienced kayaker was recreating with friends when, shortly after 1 p.m., he became trapped beneath a submerged log in Rock Creek, authorities said. The location was about 10 miles south of Red Lodge, Montana.

Conning's kayaking partner spent 10 minutes trying to free him, then summoned a second kayaker for help, authorities said. The two freed Conning, but were unable to bring him to shore.

Members of the Carbon County, Montana, Search and Rescue unit recovered Conning's body about three hours later, roughly 1 mile downstream.

Conning "was a valued member of Park County Search and Rescue, serving our citizens and visitors as a volunteer since 1997," Search and Rescue

ED CONNING

Coordinator Lance Mathess said. Conning led the unit's swift-water rescue team and was an experienced high-angle rope rescue technician. Conning served as a mentor to new Search and Rescue members and chaired its training committee, Mathess said.

Park County Sheriff Scott Steward described Conning as a "water dog" who could always be found in or near the water.

"We here at the Sheriff's Office and Search and Rescue are currently grieving the loss of our friend. But the community has also lost a caring and compassionate public servant," Steward said in a Tuesday statement. "However, there is some comfort for all of us in knowing that Ed passed away doing what he loved."

Lunches: Volunteers sought

extends the free or reduced meal programs that are provided during the school year into the summer months.

"Just as learning does not end when school lets out, neither does the need for good nutrition," explains the Department of Education's website.

Getting a free lunch this summer is not as formal as signing up for the nutrition assistance programs offered during the school year.

"We're not going to turn anyone away, and we don't ask, 'Oh, are you on a reduced meal plan at school?' We just feed them," Odom said. Parents can also buy a meal at a reduced rate, because "we wouldn't want them to wait somewhere while their child has a meal," she said.

The lunches are being provided in conjunction with the Powell Recreation District's Kid's Camp and district staff will supervise the lunches. Intended for children ages 5-9, the camp carries a charge of $31 per week for half-days or $64 for full days. However, any children under the age of 18 are welcome to join for lunch.

"They don't even have to be in that [Kid's Camp] program," explained Colby Stenerson, executive director of the Powell Recreation District. He does ask that people planning to attend lunch contact the district in advance at 754-5711 "so we can let the hospital know how many lunches we'll need."

Stenerson added that the district is "really excited" about partnering with PVHC on the Summer Food Service Program; Powell had been among just a handful of Wyoming communities without one.

R.J. Kost, the curriculum coordinator for Park County School District No. 1, said he and other school officials wanted to get involved with the program for years.

been able to develop anything through the school system that would work, because ... getting somebody that would work so few hours to prepare something in the summertime, when we don't have anyone else there, made it really difficult," he said.

As an alternative, Kost — who's the president of the Powell Valley Healthcare Board — suggested PVHC get involved, since the organization already provides meals throughout the summer to the patients, staff and long-term residents it serves.

"They [PVHC] decided it would be a great opportunity to help the kids of the community out, as well as they could do it," Kost said.

The healthcare organization ultimately determined it was an opportunity to build goodwill and a good partnership, Odom said, plus "we could already meet the requirements of being a designated site."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture will pay for the food, up to $3.92 per meal. But Odom said PVHC will need to rely on volunteers — including the organization's own employees, the Powell Medical Foundation and some local churches — to prep the food and bring it to Homesteader Park.

"I think we're going to have enough volunteers just by good word of mouth and our own employees," Odom said, but anyone interested in helping is asked to call 754-1276.

They may seek the aid of an AmeriCorps VISTA member next year.

Odom has high hopes for how the program could expand next summer — possibly adding breakfasts or having children come to the Powell Valley Care Center and involving the center's residents.

"I think it's going to be good [for the kids] and we'll see how it goes this year," she said. "Because we want to grow the program."

economic development.

"Those funds that are used to build the center then are paid back in form of lease payments and/or a refinance and buyout of the city's facility in 10-20 years," Wahrlich said.

The developer also said he expects the hotel to bring people to the conference center in the summer months, while the reverse would be true in the winter — the conference center would bring people to the hotel.

"I just think they're a symbiotic relationship," Wahrlich said. "Meetings and conferences don't normally meet in the summer, so they meet in October [through] February. That's when sports teams have basketball tournaments, swimming tournaments and all of those types of things. I see that as coming to the hotel, utilizing the conference center, whether or not it's banquet meals or things like that, or [an] association within the state or small regional meetings from that standpoint."

As for the summer months, "I see potentially more weddings and types of things, and I see more leisure travel being done," he said. "I don't see the conference center being as busy during the summer as I do during the winter."

The hotel, which would have between 72 and 78 rooms, would fill a major need for Powell and also for Park County, which has just six hotels with 70 or more rooms, Bekes said.

"Powell needs additional and modern lodging," Bekes said.

"We have some, but it's not enough."

Wahrlich said that if all goes well, the hotel could be up and functioning in the next two years.

"Ideally, [we would] open up in March or April of 2020, before the summer season hits in Yellowstone," Wahrlich said. "That would be the ultimate — the best, best, perfect case ever."

Bekes is excited to see how the project turns out.

"It's really a very exciting time for Powell," Bekes said. "I'm not suggesting that it's never been done in the past, but to be done in such a focused way, I've not seen any documentation ... to where we have really put this much effort behind growing our tourism economy."

Cheney: Event raised $40,000 for Park County GOP

"This officer came in and said, 'Sir, we have a plane headed for Crown [the White House] at a high rate of speed. Are we authorized to take it out?'" Cheney said. "And I said, 'Yes.' He stepped out, came back in and asked again — he wanted to make certain he heard it properly — and I said, 'Yes.'"

That airplane turned out to be Flight 93, where the passengers fought back against hijackers and forced the plane to crash in rural Pennsylvania. Dick Cheney described what the passengers did as "one of the most courageous acts I can imagine."

Ironically, the former vice president took part in Continuity of Government training as a Wyoming Congressman in the 1980s, which prepared for a much worse event than 9/11.

"As bad as the events of 9/11 were, some of us had practiced exercises for far more dangerous and difficult circumstances — an all-out Soviet nuclear attack on the United States," Vice President Cheney said. "That [training] helped — that training kicked in that morning for those of us that had been involved in the program."

Vice President Cheney told attendees at the dinner that 9/11 represented a turning point in how he and then-President George W. Bush dealt with terrorism in America.

"The situation that we had to recognize, that hadn't been recognized before, was that this was not a law-enforcement problem," Cheney said. "Before that, we'd always treated terrorist attacks as a law-enforcement problem — send the FBI on them, they'd get the bad guys and put them on trial. We lost more people there than we lost at Pearl Harbor; 2,400 at Pearl Harbor and we lost 3,000 that morning on 9/11."

"The president believed very deeply, as I did, that this was an act of war ... and that we were justified in using all the means at our disposal in order to go find and take out whoever had been responsible — it turned out to be Bin Laden — but also to do everything we could to prevent any further attacks."

About 240 people attended Friday's sold-out dinner at the Holiday Inn, including U.S. Sen. John Barrasso, former U.S. Sen. Alan Simpson, U.S. Rep. Liz Cheney and several statewide Republican political candidates. The event raised $40,000 for the county GOP.

"The Cheney family is amazing," said Denise Shirley, who serves as the state committeewoman for the Park County Republican Party and helped organize the dinner. "They have deep roots in Wyoming. They visit Park County frequently and Congresswoman Liz Cheney is doing an exceptional job for the great state of Wyoming."

Shirley said she was honored to have the Cheneyes at the Lincoln Day Dinner.

"When he [Vice President Cheney] spoke about 9/11, it brought back so many emotions," Shirley said. "It was a reminder of a time when there were true heroes that saved so many lives by sacrificing their own. It was a reminder that at that point in time we were not Republicans, Democrats or independents; we were just Americans moving through the biggest tragedy of our lifetime."

POWELL TRIBUNE

IN OUR OPINION

Want to make a difference in Powell? Run for a City Council position

Voters will elect four leaders to the Powell City Council this year: The mayor and three council members. The problem is that as of Wednesday, no one has filed for one of the open seats.

Mayor John Wetzel is seeking to serve two more years in the post, to finish out the term of the late Mayor Don Hillman; a longtime councilman, Wetzel was appointed to the position last year after Hillman's death. In Ward 2, Scott Mangold is running for a four-year term. Mangold previously served as mayor, then was appointed to Ward 2 to fill Wetzel's vacated seat last year.

On Wednesday, two candidates filed for Ward 3: Tim Sapp will seek re-election, while newcomer Tawnya Peterson is seeking her first term on the council.

No one had stepped up to run for the Ward 1 seat as of Wednesday afternoon, and time is running out. The candidate filing period ends at 5 p.m. Friday.

If no candidates file for the open position by the deadline, then Powell voters will have to write in names on their August ballots. The two people who receive the most write-in votes — assuming they get three or more votes — could then advance to the general election in November.

We hope it doesn't reach that point. While we have seen write-in candidates go on to become successful elected officials on local boards, now is the best time for prospective council members to declare their intentions. Further, voters are better served when they have a choice. Unfortunately, we have seen multiple years when most Powell City Council races are uncontested.

When there's only one candidate — or worse yet, no candidates — voters can feel like it doesn't matter if they show up on Election Day.

Each vote does matter, especially in local races. In the 2014 election, the Powell City Council Ward 3 race came down to just 18 votes.

While statewide or national offices usually get the limelight — and the more attractive salaries — local public officials do the hard work that often matters most in our community.

City Council members make decisions that directly affect local residents, such as making it illegal to hold and talk on a cell phone while driving. The City Council also determines how much you pay for garbage, where you can park an RV and whether a new subdivision or dog park can be built by your home.

During its upcoming meeting on Monday evening, the City Council will decide whether to submit an application for a grant of up to $3 million to fund a publicly owned conference center to a planned hotel. The state money — through a Wyoming Business Council grant — would be used toward a 10,000 square foot conference center with a commercial kitchen.

The grant application is just one of the many important decisions that Powell City Council leaders must make during their meetings.

We appreciate those who have spent years serving the community as public servants. As some longtime officials at the local and state levels decide it's time to pass the torch, we hope new leaders will be ready to take on the challenge.

In the months leading up to August's election, we'll certainly encourage voters to show up at the polls. But before then, let's ensure they have a choice in whom they elect.

Traveling in God's country

When I told friends and family that I was packing up and moving to Wyoming, I told them that I was moving to God's country.

I was reminded of why this past weekend.

I love a good road trip, enough to drive hundreds of miles on occasion. With a three-day weekend and much of Wyoming yet to be explored, western Wyoming and its many sights — not to mention a few other new-to-me places — started calling to me last week.

I kicked off by driving through Wind River Canyon on the way to Shoshoni, then headed west on U.S. Highway 26 through western Fremont County and stopped for gasoline in Dubois.

The fun started in earnest shortly afterward as I looked out the window and saw the ground covered with snow as I went over the Continental Divide and into Teton County — not an everyday sight for someone who grew up about 10 miles north of the Arkansas-Missouri border.

After going through Moran Junction and making the turn to head to Jackson, I got my first good look at the Tetons, including Buck Mountain and Prospectors Mountain. Maybe it's just me, but the Tetons look like the bluest mountains I have ever seen.

But wait, there's more!

After stopping to eat in a bustling Jackson (it was Memorial Day weekend, after all), I took U.S. Highway 89 south into Lincoln County — with the Snake River on my left and more of the Tetons on the right — before stopping in Alpine at a Texaco station. Alpine is home of perhaps the only Texaco station in all of Wyoming, which I find even cooler because I collect Texaco memorabilia.

My travels then took me into eastern Idaho — the first time I'd ever visited Idaho — and on to Interstate 15, where I drove to Salt Lake City and called it a day to remember.

The trip back wasn't too bad, either.

Before leaving Utah, I stopped at In-N-Out Burger and ordered eight — yes, eight — double-double animal style burgers, which I immediately put in a cooler with dry ice. Yes, I love In-N-Out Burger, and if you've eaten there, you know why.

The drive back to Powell included driving through Evanston, Kemmerer and Lander — which meant seeing the southern Wind River Mountains and Red Canyon. Southern Fremont County has more than its share of natural beauty, which added some nice icing to the cake on the long trip home.

The long weekend was a reminder of what many of us already know: Wyoming has some of the most beautiful sights of any place in the United States — or the world, for that matter. Snow-capped mountains, lush forests, whitewater rivers and deep, breathtaking canyons are all within a few hours drive for those of us who live in Park County. Not many people are able to say that.

And I have a freezer full of In-N-Out burgers to top it all off! I won't have to cook as much for a while, that's for sure.

Remember to be humble

By the time you read this, Memorial Day 2018 will be a historical event.

This is because Congress decided to fix the observance of Memorial Day on the last Monday in May back in 1968 — a century after General John Logan announced that May 30 should be set aside to honor those killed in the Civil War. Logan actually didn't have any official power to create this holiday for the nation, although he was a member of Congress. But he was the national leader of the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization of veterans who fought for the Union during the Civil War. The GAR was a pretty big organization, though, with hundreds of posts around the nation. There were even a few chapters in the South, and at least one post here in our neck of the woods. That post, located in Basin, left its mark on the community in 1909 by obtaining a couple of retired cannons, which stand guard in front of the Big Horn County Library a century later.

Such widespread, grassroots presence around the nation meant that a decree from the head of the GAR would be taken seriously, and communities and states around the nation began officially observing May 30 as the day to honor Civil War veterans by decorating their graves. The official name of the holiday was Decoration Day, but its popular name was Memorial Day. At first, the focus of the day was the more than half a million soldiers who died in the Civil War, but since World War I, the dead of all our wars have been honored. It was not a national holiday until Congress acted in the late 1960s. At the same time, they officially named it Memorial Day and, over the objections of many veterans and veterans groups, changed the day it was celebrated to the last Monday in May.

It seems to me Memorial Day has become not just a day to honor those who died in defense of freedom. Instead, it has become a celebration of patriotism in general, with a lot of flag-waving and speeches about the righteousness and greatness of our nation. That's not necessarily a bad thing, but at the risk of being branded an enemy of the Republic, I think we too often exaggerate our nation's role in the world while demeaning the contributions of other nations.

For example, while it's important to honor those who gave their lives in the service of our country, maybe we should acknowledge that Americans aren't the only ones who made sacrifices in conflicts that shaped and defended the liberties we enjoy. Britain, for example, stood alone against Nazi Germany for many months, hoping that we Americans would come to realize that our freedom was in danger from fascist domination just as theirs was. Moreover, men from British Commonwealth nations such as India, Canada, Australia and New Zealand came to the aid of Britain, and native Indians at home went hungry as their crop production was taken to feed troops in Europe and the Pacific. They deserve to be remembered for their sacrifices, too.

Farther back in history, we might remember that the French fleet took casualties while playing a crucial role in the decisive American victory at Yorktown. Ironically, less than 25 years earlier, the British pushed the French out of what was to become the Northwest Territory of the U.S. after Yorktown.

Even farther back, people died in many forgotten battles that helped build the world that gave rise to our ideas about liberty. The religious wars during the Protestant Revolution were important as was the warfare that built Rome and then helped cause its decline. Even earlier, the battles fought by the Greeks, the Hebrews and empires ruled by Egyptians, Babylonians, Persians and others shaped the institutions, religions and philosophies that were the ancestors of our own.

Obviously, we can't decorate all those graves every Memorial Day, but I believe we should remember those who occupy them, because it would remind us that our part of the millennia-long story of mankind is only a brief episode. As Americans, we can point with pride to many — although not all — of our achievements, but we need to remember that the soil where those achievements took root is the result of centuries of human activity in that long-ago past. Doing so would temper the pride we have in our nation with a dose of humility.

This Memorial Day, we are being told that we are "Making America great again." From what I have seen though, making us great appears to involve bragging about ourselves, and bullying or belittling other nations. That's not the way to greatness. Being great also requires humility, and without humility, pride becomes excessive.

Excessive pride, one of the seven deadly sins, leads not to greatness, but to a fall.

Teen smashes largemouth bass record

An 11.5-pound largemouth bass caught north of Sheridan this month shattered Wyoming's old record by nearly 4 pounds. The catch by Meeteetse High School graduate and Sheridan College freshman Caleb Salzman also bested the records of Wyoming's neighboring states, plus several in the Midwest, too.

"Nobody was more surprised than me," said Salzman. "I still can't hardly believe it."

The 18-year-old hooked the memorable record on a green plastic worm at Kleenburn Ponds on May 10.

Although the record will legally be listed at 11.51 pounds, the documents could have read 12 pounds or even a little more had the fish been officially weighed the evening it was caught: Salzman said the bass weighed 12 1/2 pounds on a "cheap" tackle box scale that night. The fish lost at least several ounces to dehydration before being officially weighed the next morning.

"Catching a largemouth bass of this size is comparable to shooting a 400-inch bull elk in a general license public land area," said Paul Mavrakis, the Wyoming Game and Fish Department's fisheries supervisor in Sheridan. "It's an incredible accomplishment because the [Kleenburn] Ponds receive heavy fishing pressure."

The weight wasn't the only impressive vital statistic: The bass measured 24.5 inches long with a 20.75-inch girth.

Mavrakis said the department has netted bass in Kleenburn "that may have come close to the old record" of 7.87 pounds, but nothing near the size of Salzman's fish.

How the fish grew so surprisingly large, was probably a combination of it taking advantage of the location's long-growing season by Wyoming standards and the pond's abundant small bass, perch and also probably the 8-inch rainbows stocked every fall, the Game and Fish says.

Salzman and his catch are about the same age. Game and Fish personnel examined a scale from the big bass under a microscope—similar to counting rings on a tree stump—and believe the fish to be 17 to 19 years old.

"The fish had to be incredibly savvy," Mavrakis said. "I can't imagine how many lures and baits she's looked at over the years and wouldn't be surprised if she broke an angler's line a time or two, also."

He added that, after many years of spawning, the big fish's genes should be well-represented in the two connected ponds, which

Caleb Salzman (left), a Meeteetse High School graduate, caught a record-breaking 11.5-pound largemouth bass north of Sheridan recently. 'Nobody was more surprised than me,' said Salzman. 'I still can't hardly believe it.' Photo courtesy Wyoming Game and Fish Department total about 10 acres in size.

The prior record bass was also caught in a northern Sheridan County pond, reeled in by 15-year-old Dustin Shorma and witnessed by friend Gordon Edwards back on March 15, 1992.

Serendipitously, when Salzman brought his catch to the Sheridan Game and Fish office May 11 to have the species officially identified, Shorma, who's now the Dayton Game Warden, was on site. And Edwards, now a department fish biologist, was on hand to witness the new record become officially certified.

"Records are made to be broken and this fish did more than break my record—it crushed it!" said a happy Shorma. "Who would know that 26 years later, Gordon and I would find ourselves as the district game warden and fish biologist in the same place we grew up, only to pass the torch on to another worthy individual."

Salzman, who aspires to be a game warden, is getting his record bass mounted and plans to revisit Kleenburn Ponds when he returns to Sheridan College for the fall semester. The 2017 Meeteetse High School graduate plans to work for the Shoshone National Forest this summer.

"This experience has been so cool," Salzman said. "I really feel fortunate to have caught this tremendous fish."

Kleenburn Ponds was once the site of a coal mine. The area was greatly improved in 2009 through abandoned mine land project funding. Mavrakis credits the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality for its role in reclaiming the area and Sheridan County for acquiring and improving the property for public access.

WYOMING FFA

POWELL-SHOSHONE MEMBERS HONORED

Four Powell students received the 2018 Wyoming State FFA Degree—the highest award the state can bestow on FFA members.

Powell-Shoshone members Aspen Aguirre, Kathleen Bush, Cayle Kremer and Bronson Smith were honored with their degrees in April during the Wyoming FFA Convention in Cheyenne.

"The State FFA Degree is awarded to FFA members who have demonstrated the highest level of commitment to FFA and made significant accomplishments in their supervised agriculture experiences," said State FFA Adviser Stacy Broda.

Less than 10 percent of FFA members in Wyoming earn the degree each year, marking it as a significant accomplishment, said Broda.

When students enroll in agriculture education and FFA, they select a hands-on program of work, known as a supervised agriculture experience (SAE).

These programs help solidify concepts learned in the classroom or through FFA experiences, and include the student's individual interests and goals.

SAEs can include animal production, agribusiness experience or placement in an agriculture business or company.

"Each recipient has shown growth in their SAE as well as demonstrated leadership, scholastic achievement and participation in community service activities," Broda said.

sociate professor of agroecology and range management at Northwest College. In a news release, Wyoming FFA called Humphreys "a constant supporter of FFA" in the state.

He organized the agronomy and environmental and natural resources competitions at NWC for the past several years, giving FFA members the opportunity to hone their skills prior to heading to the State Leadership Conference. Humphreys is always willing to help with FFA activities and has given valuable input helping to make agronomy and career development events relevant and enjoyable, FFA leaders say.

"Wyoming FFA relies on the support of exceptional teachers, individuals and companies to provide life-changing experiences for its members," said State FFA Adviser Stacy Broda.

The 14 recipients of the Honorary State FFA Degree—including Wyoming Superintendent of Public Instruction Jillian Balow—were honored in a special ceremony at the Cheyenne Civic Center last month.

During the 2018 Wyoming FFA Convention last month, the Powell-Shoshone Chapter members won the following awards:

DIGEST

FIRE CLAIMS CAMPER

These charred remains are all that's left of a camper that burned Saturday night on Wyo. Highway 294 in Badger Basin. 'The owner reported to us that coming down Sand Coulee hill, he had two tires on the camper blow out,' said Powell Fire Chief Damian Dicks. 'He pulled the camper into the pull out at the bottom of the hill and went back home to get items to repair. Upon returning he found the fire department there extinguishing the camper.' Members of the Powell Volunteer Fire Department were paged to the scene at 9:49 p.m.; the camper was 'fully involved' when the first truck arrived, Dicks said. Crews spent more than an hour and a half dousing the camper and traffic was temporarily halted while firefighters worked the blaze. 'At this point, we do not have a cause,' Dicks said Wednesday. # BUS DRIVERS TRAIN ON WORST-CASE SCENARIOS

BY MARY LYNN
Tribune Intern

Bus drivers in Powell are receiving training to help protect students.

The ALICE (Alert, Lockdown, Inform, Counter, Evacuate) Training Program includes guidance for situations of active shooters and aggressive intruders on school buses.

"We are carrying the most precious cargo," said Stephen Janes, transportation supervisor for Park County School District No. 1.

PCSD No. 1 Superintendent Jay Curtis has asked all members of the school district to learn how to respond to the deadly situation of a school shooter. The ALICE Training Program, which goes beyond the traditional instruction of going into lockdown mode, has been introduced to everyone within the school system. That includes teachers, coaches and bus drivers.

"ALICE Training on school buses allows for drivers to be aware of their surroundings, to be more alert, and to be more observant of students," Janes explained in an interview.

The training program began in Powell in the summer of 2016, followed by a series of renewed training every six months. However, ALICE Training on school buses is more recent.

"Every driver of ours is trained to keep students safe," Janes said. "That is our main objective."

Trainings cover all possible scenarios, ranging from the situation of someone entering the bus with children to having a stranger waiting at a known bus stop.

"We want our drivers to be aware, to know their usual students, and to know who is getting off at what bus stop," Janes said. "We have people ready and prepared in loading zones at the different schools, but only bus drivers can prevent harm to the students between school and home."

ALICE Training for school buses will begin incorporating students and evacuations in the 2018-19 school year.

Mudslides: More rain possible

and bridge crews are similarly stymied by the wet slide.

"Things are still moving" and although no other cabins are believed to be at risk, the slide is "getting a little wider," Edwards said Wednesday evening. It's reached the yard of a third cabin, owned by Bob Senitte, who works in the county engineer's office.

"It looks like it's far enough from his cabin that he [Senitte] should be OK, but it's pretty spooky for him to be watching that," Edwards said.

The ground will have to dry out before the work of clearing and rebuilding two or three "pretty bad" parts of the road can start, he said.

Part of the concern is that crews don't want to weaken the "toe" of the slope and further destabilize it.

"It's hard for the people that live up there ... I know that they want us to come right in and fix it," Edwards said Tuesday. "It's just that you can create a bigger mess and bigger problem and an unsafe situation by going in willy-nilly and trying to do something [before] it stabilizes."

"It's kind of a helpless situation," he added.

With the county road shut down, emergency access to the properties located beyond the slides has been provided via a private road that crosses a nearby ranch.

Beth Rodriguez and her husband Paul were at the family cabin on the upper Squaw Creek road over Memorial Day. She said it may be a long time until they get back to their cabin.

"We built our cabin in 1976, and we've never seen anything like this before," Rodriguez said, describing trees and boulders carried off the mountain in the wake of snowmelt and heavy spring moisture.

"It's not safe until that stuff stops running off the mountain," she said.

Edwards and others similarly said mudslides are not a common problem in the Squaw Creek area. But it's been a wet couple of years.

"I think just with the last couple winters, just getting so much snow up there and the snowpack, the ground's saturated and everything's sliding," Edwards said.

Less than a mile from the main slide area, on nearby Rustic Road, another chunk of land, perhaps 100 yards wide, is sliding down a hillside. However, the soil is moving slowly and doesn't appear to be threatening houses, so "we have some time on that one," said Sue Stresser, the district ranger for the Shoshone National Forest's North Zone.

That area above Rustic Road has probably been slowly slipping since the large fires that hit the Yellowstone area in 1988, she said.

"Now ... because these last two winters have been so wet after being in a drought, it's like this huge heavy sponge that has sopped up all this moisture and it's just starting to slide because of gravity," Stresser said.

She added there's often nothing forest officials can do to mitigate a slide.

"If it's coming off National Forest System lands, there's not a lot we can do from a 'how do you control Mother Nature' standpoint," Stresser said.

County crews have been dealing with washouts in other areas, including on the upper South Fork. There's also been slide activity on the North Fork. Earlier this month, land slid into a pond on the Prince Ranch in the Wapiti area, sending water down the hill toward another property, said Park County Homeland Security Coordinator Mart Knapp.

However, the slides on Road XUX are by far the most severe.

"What we're worried about is if we get more rain," Edwards said.

There's a chance for more precipitation today (Thursday).

A slide brought large trees along with it over the Memorial Day weekend. Parts of Park County Road XUX started washing out more than a week ago, but the route remained passable until subsequent larger slides started. It awakened one resident from her sleep, who said the slide sounded like a train near her home. Amid mud and debris (left), an excavator works along the road on Sunday afternoon.

WINDS REACH 111-135 MPH IN CHEYENNE AREA TORNADO

CHEYENNE (WNE) — The National Weather Service ranked Sunday's tornado that damaged eight homes near Federal as a two out of five on a scale used to rank tornado damage.

The winds that ripped the roof off at least two homes topped out at 111-135 miles per hour when it passed through the area northwest of Cheyenne, but the tornado could have been even stronger after it left Federal.

Wind speeds are almost impossible to estimate without surveying damage, said Chad Hahn, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service.

"It is likely that the tornado continued to occur even outside of what we have included in our report, but we didn't have any damage in that area, so we couldn't rate it," he said. And despite the fact that three tornadoes touched down in Laramie County over the weekend, such activity is normal for this time of year, meteorologists say.

"Late May and early June is our historical severe weather season for this spring period here across Cheyenne, southeast Wyoming and western Nebraska," said Mike Heuer, a meteorologist with Day-Weather Inc.

Historically, the biggest tornado on record to hit Cheyenne occurred in mid-July 1979, Hahn said.

"Last year, we had the most notable tornado outbreak in history on June 12," Hahn said. "The number (of tornadoes) that we saw that day was unmatched."

Crandall area road closed due to resource damage

The Shoshone National Forest has closed a road in the Crandall area of the Clarks Fork District due to resource damage. The gate to Forest Service Road 165, located across Wyo. Highway 296 from the North Crandall Trailhead, has been closed and locked to allow the road to dry out.

It was severely damaged when multiple vehicles attempted to drive the route during recent wet conditions, Shoshone officials say.

"Once conditions improve, we will be able to open the road," said District Ranger Sue Stresser. "Until that time, we ask that all members of the public respect the closure."

Rain leads to Big Horn Basin flooding

TEN SLEEP (WNE) — An abundance of overnight rain on Sunday caused at least three creeks in the Big Horn Basin to flood their banks, and emergency crews to be mobilized.

In Ten Sleep, the Tensleep Creek crested overnight Sunday, after a flood warning was issued for the weekend due to high mountain rain. Law enforcement and county emergency services were called to the scene of at least one Ten Sleep property in jeopardy of flooding, and water was diverted using sand bags provided by the county. As of Tuesday, Tensleep Creek had receded to normal levels and all alerts were cancelled.

In Big Horn County, volunteers were mobilized by the Greybull Fire Department after flooding of Shell Creek caused some property to flood. Sand bags were used to mitigate the damage and divert the water away from low-lying property.

"Monday morning was the most intense," noted Big Horn County Emergency Management Director LaRae Dobbs.

ATHLETES FROM WYOMING, MONTANA COMPETE

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

The Powell Aquatic Center hosted its seventh annual triathlon race Saturday morning, featuring 42 athletes taking part under sunny skies and warm conditions, with very little wind.

Competitors from all over Wyoming and parts of Montana made the trip for the event, which represents the very first triathlon of the season for the state.

"We were so lucky to have the weather cooperate for just one day," said race director Tanya Bonner.

This year's race began by swimming 20 lengths of the PAC's pool, totaling 500 yards, before transitioning to the bicycle stage, located by the Parks Department building.

From there, riders pedaled along East Seventh Street, went north on Road 8, west again on Lane 8 and turned north onto Elk Basin Highway before reaching the turnaround and making their way back — totaling 15.5 miles.

Upon returning back to the transition, station, the bikes were abandoned and the final leg of the race began: a 5K run down West Seventh Street to Grand Street and back.

Showing a widespread appeal, competitors ranged in age from single digits to their 60s, with everyone appearing to enjoy themselves (as much as one can in a triathlon).

Those who finished early congregated around the finish line, shouting encouragement to those that followed and creating a friendly yet competitive vibe.

"Being the very first triathlon of the season, we like to keep it relaxed and fun," said Bonner, who, along with teammates Reanne Wolff and Rinda Eastman, finished first among the women's teams with a time of 1:18.23. "People tell us constantly how they enjoy the PAC triathlon and plan to make it a regular event on their annual calendar. Whether you're a veteran triathlete or a beginner, you'll have a blast."

Just about every section of Wyoming was represented by this year's participants, as well as parts of Montana.

"Our numbers were slightly up from last year with 25 soloists and six teams,"

Free fishing on Saturday

KIDS EVENTS IN POWELL AND CODY

Saturday is Free Fishing Day across the state of Wyoming, meaning anyone may fish without a fishing license or conservation stamp. All limits and other fishing regulations apply.

Along with the free fishing, special events for children are being held in Powell and Cody.

The 32nd Annual Kids' Fishing Day at Homesteader Park will run from 6-10 a.m. Space is limited to 35 children per one-hour block. As of Wednesday, the 6 a.m. slot had been filled, but space remained for the other times.

Parents can sign their kids up by calling the Powell Recreation District at 754-5711.

Meanwhile, local children are also invited to the annual Cody Kids Fishing Day event, set for 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Beck Lake Recreation Area.

"This is a great opportunity for Cody area youth and their families to spend the day outdoors learning about the sport of fishing," said Tara Hodges, information and education specialist for the Wyoming Game and Fish Department. "The event is free of charge and the entire family is encouraged to attend."

The day will begin with educational activities that include spin and fly casting, knot tying and learning how to release a fish. A free hotdog lunch and a fishing derby will follow in the afternoon. Children and their families will have the opportunity to catch yellow perch,

Mud rides discouraged at Cody bike park

BY MARK DAVIS
Tribune Staff Writer

The Park County Pedalers spend a lot of time encouraging riders to get out on their bikes. Unless it's wet.

Despite many signs at Beck Lake Bike Park — some which announce the bike park is closed — riders are using the trails after it rains. The damage done to the trails, especially to the pump track and jump lines, takes a great deal of work to fix, said John Gallagher, Pedaler organizer.

"There's always a couple riders that think it's rideable when it isn't," Gallagher said.

Dozens of volunteers came to the park to do a spring cleaning of the trail system on May 19. It's the park's first spring and the learning curve of finding where natural erosion of the dirt tracks require

Dano'lope' Dash set for Saturday at fairgrounds

The seventh annual Dano'lope' Dash will be held Saturday at the Park County Fairgrounds in Powell. The event features a 10K run, a 5K run/walk and a 1-mile dash. A free brunch for all will be served after the race.

The cost of the run/walk is $20 for youth and $25 for adults. Registration can be done online at www.danoyouthcamp.org.

Run/walk packet pickup and late registration will be available on Friday from 5-8 p.m.

and on Saturday from 7-8 a.m. at the fairgrounds. The run/walk starts at 8 a.m.

Proceeds will benefit the Dano Youth Camp, a non-profit outdoor wilderness adventure camp. Jerry and Joyce Ostrom started the Dano Youth Camp in memory of their son Dan, who died in a horse-riding accident in the Crandall area in 1996. The camp is offered free of charge to Park County teens aged 13-16.

There are four camp sessions held each summer, with about 40 campers total. The camp is open to boys and girls, with both genders having two camps each.

"There will be awards for all age divisions, door prizes, snacks and brunch," said Alex Aguirre, race chairman. "The Dano Youth Camp is all about leadership and growing."

Pioneers fall to Riverton, weather over weekend

GAME AGAINST BILLINGS CALLED AFTER TWO INNINGS

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

The Powell Pioneers Legion baseball team was on the road over the Memorial Day weekend, returning home with a mixed bag of results.

Saturday found the Pioneers in Riverton, where a disastrous fourth inning led to a 13-1 loss to open conference play. Monday's game against Billings had the Pioneers angling back into the win column with a 5-1 lead after two innings. But as she's done frequently this season, Mother Nature made an appearance, forcing a cancellation of the game due to rain.

"Overall it was an OK weekend," said Pioneers' head coach Joe Cates. "We're seeing the ball well, we put the ball in play. We didn't strike out very much."

Saturday's game at Riverton got off to a good start for the Pioneers, with Colin Queen getting the start on the mound.

"Colin [Queen] has been real consistent for us, pounding the zone full of strikes. He did the same against Riverton, he came out and really pounded the zone," said Cates. "He had control of the ball game."

Queen gave up a couple earned runs and two unearned runs coming from errors behind him. With his pitch count creeping up, Queen was pulled in the

Memorial Day Golf Tournament battles elements

TWO-DAY EVENT ATTRACTS 18 TEAMS FOR SOGGY FINISH

With weather that ran the gamut between relatively dry and the British Open on its worst day, the Powell Golf Club hosted its Memorial Day Tournament over the weekend. A total of 18 pairs of players participated.

The two-day tournament began with a shamle format on Sunday, in which the best drive was selected from each team, then team members played their own golf balls from that point to the hole. Monday featured a best ball format.

The team of Bill Hendricks and Denise Barnes finished first, with a two-day net score of 131.

Tied for second were the teams of Brock Frates/Steve Williams and Jerry Herweyer/fourth inning in favor of Nate Brown. With two outs and runners on first and second, Brown took care of the player at the plate, recording a strikeout to end the inning.

And that's when the wheels came off. Brown started the fifth by hitting the first two batters he faced; a bunt by the next batter loaded the bases. A walk and a pair of base hits followed, and before the Pioneers knew what hit them, Riverton had scored nine straight runs to blow the game open.

"We pulled Brown and brought in Cameron Wentz, and Wentz struggled a bit," Cates said. "He walked two or three guys, and then we brought in Mason Marchant, our freshman. He pounded the zone and got us out of the inning."

Marchant came out again for the sixth, striking out the side and leaving two runners on base. But the nine-run fifth proved too much to overcome, and the Pioneers lost 13-1.

"It was one bad inning, not pounding the zone, just not doing the little things well," Cates said. "We weren't throwing strikes, and that killed us. Our downfall really was that we had some mental mistakes on the bases, and some rough pitching for one inning, and that's what cost us the ball game."

Despite the score, Cates said the Pioneers were hitting the ball well; the lack of runs was a combination of poor baserunning and hits not dropping.

"We should have had a few runs; we just kind of struggled on the bases a little bit," he said. "Guys would forget to tag, hesitate on ground balls when they should be going right away, that kind of thing. It's a bit of a momentum killer, when you have a chance to score a run and you don't."

The Pioneers had a day to shake off the loss before heading to Billings for a Memorial Day doubleheader against the Angels. But after jumping out to a quick 5-1 lead in the first game, the rain began and never stopped. Ryley Meyer got the start for Powell but only threw 17 pitches before the game was called.

"We score four in the first, come back and score one in the second," Cates said. "We're seeing the ball well, guys are getting hits. Then it starts to sprinkle, and bam! It was like a wall of rain just hit us."

Cates said the Pioneers probably won't have the opportunity to make up the games due to a busy schedule for both teams, though he would've liked to have finished the weekend.

"It would have been nice to have two more wins under our belts, get out of there with a winning record," Cates said. "But I like where we're at — I love how aggressive we've been at the plate. The guys are having fun and they're confident."

The Pioneers are a young team, but Cates said he likes what he's seen this season so far.

"I think the team really trusts each other," he said. "We've got some freshmen that came up from Babe Ruth this year [who] have some grit to them. They're not afraid to go [all] out. It's been good to see that ... If this team stays together and keeps playing, I don't see why they can't make state the next two years."

The Pioneers are home this weekend, hosting a doubleheader Saturday against the Billings Blue Jays. Game times are scheduled for 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. The Powell team will then host a doubleheader Monday against the Cody B squad starting at 5:30 p.m.

The eighth annual PEAKS to Conga bicycle ride will take place on June 23. The 66-mile fundraiser is fully supported, and stretches between Cody and Shell. Support for the event has increased significantly over the past few years and raised more than $80,000 to assist cancer patients and their families in the Big Horn Basin.

The fundraising conducted by PEAKS (People Everywhere are Kind & Sharing) and its volunteers provide financial assistance with non-medical expenses to cancer patients and their families. This event is made possible by the volunteers from communities from throughout the

PEAKS to Conga chair

Big Horn Basin. St. Vincent Healthcare Foundation manages and admits the funds.

"A cancer diagnosis affects all aspects of a patient's life, and can drastically impact a family's financial, mental, and physical state," said Laurie Stoelk, PEAKS to Conga event chair.

Riders this year will start at Cody Coffee Roasters at 7 a.m. and cross the finish line in downtown Shell. The ride concludes with a Shellebration at Shell Community Hall, with food vendors, yoga, post-ride massages and live music by local favorite Luke Bell and his band at 7 p.m.

In addition to the post-ride festivities, a silent auction, a 50/50 raffle and a bike raffle for a Salsa Marrakesh touring bicycle, generously donated by JoyVagen Cycles, will take place. Family and community members are encouraged to come out to support the event.

Support vehicles will be available along the route and snacks, water and technical assistance will also be ready for the races — all thanks to a variety of sponsors.

Businesses and individuals from throughout Big Horn Basin area are invested in this cause. Honorary tribute signs will line the bicycle route. Each sign represents a $100 donation and honors loved ones who have battled cancer or are currently fighting the disease.

One particular local business, the Cody Martial Arts Studio, has been involved with the event for the past several years. Cody Martial Arts Studio raises funds throughout the year for PEAKS to Conga. The studio sells T-shirts and hosts "kickathons" for their students to pledge money to help donate to PEAKS, and donate time, money and resources during the ride.

Alyson Kendall, mother of a Cody Martial Arts student, is a cancer survivor herself, and has had many family members impacted by the disease. Last year, she loaded up her camper and invited martial arts students to sponsor a stop along the route.

"I may not be able to ride 66 miles, but I can support participants and fundraising," Kendall said. "But together, we can help those who are currently in the battle with cancer."

Following a one-year hiatus, the Cowboy Kickoff Concert will return in 2018 on Friday, Aug. 31, featuring headliner and reigning CMA and ACM Vocal Duo of the Year Brothers Osborne.

This year's event, a partnership between University of Wyoming Athletics, 7220 Entertainment and ASTEC, will be held at the Arena-Auditorium on the UW campus.

Bike park: Thursday Night Ride Series starts tonight for experienced riders

Even their footsteps had to be repaired to make the trails smooth again. There has been so much moisture, the group is already breaking out the weed wackers.

They plan to purchase and apply an organic hardening compound, "like a powdered Elmer's glue," Gallagher said. The compound is used on Olympic BMX courses to hold dirt in place and it may cut down on the amount of maintenance needed at the park. The Pedalers also plan to install an automated sprinkler system, for when the ground is too dry and starts to crack.

Despite all the years of effort it took to build the park in Cody, the biking club is also encouraging riders to follow them to new riding destinations. Tonight (Thursday) is the first installment of the Thursday Night Ride Series. Organizers will lead riders on an intense two-hour tour of the Slickrock Trail near the Cody archery range.

"[Thursday night rides] are not for beginners," Gallagher said. "We're trying to get people to move beyond what they know."

There are several sweet trails to explore, especially after the snow melts in the mountains, Gallagher said. Future Thursday rides will require more travel and will include trips on the Blackwater Trail and beyond.

Refreshing rain

For the last few days, we have a rarity here in this part of Wyoming: We've had abundant rain. For about a month around the end of May and first of part of June, everything greens up in Wyoming. For this boy from the Smokey Mountains of North Carolina, I still enjoy a little green every once in a while. In fact, after a nice rain, isn't it nice how refreshing it feels outside? It's like everything becomes new again. Particularly living here, we cherish the moments after many months of either white or brown landscapes.

The Bible tells us that the Lord's presence in our lives is refreshing. When we receive Christ as Lord, the Bible tells us it is "refreshing" (Acts 3:20) as it cleanses us from our sins. But even after we become Christians, there are times we need to be refreshed, or have his fresh "rain" fall on us. Have you ever had a tough time in life, a spiritually dry season, or just left wondering if God is with you? For myself, this is the time I must go and spend time with the Lord.

TIM MORROW

We spend time with God basically in two ways, alone with God in prayer and scripture, or with the fellowship of other believers in worship on Sundays. The next time you have a devotion in the morning or attend worship on Sunday, instead of it being 'duty' for you, look at it as a time of refreshing! When we speak or sing of God's goodness, Christ's grace given freely to us, Christ's atoning sacrifice on the cross, his glorious resurrection, his daily being with us at church, it's refreshing to my soul like fresh rain. One of my favorite verses is Zechariah 10:1, "Ask rain from the Lord in the season of the spring rain, from the Lord who makes the storm clouds, and he will give them showers of rain." For the believer in Christ, these words remind me daily of the refreshing available as God's child!

Let's enjoy the spring rains in Wyoming — and let them remind us of the goodness of God's refreshing in our own lives as we commune with him in private and public worship, knowing he is the rain we desire. For Jesus' words truly assure us, "The water that I will give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life." (John 4:14)

Registration for educational activities begins at 8:30 a.m. at the lower picnic area.

Each participant will receive a prize bag and additional prizes will be awarded during the fishing derby. Participants should bring their own poles, tackle and bait, but some fishing gear and bait will be available if needed. As Wyoming's weather can be unpredictable, everyone should dress warmly and be prepared for cold, wet weather.

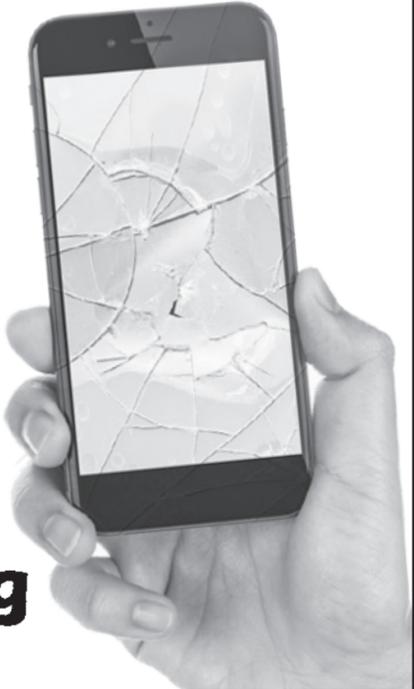

Kids' fishing day events are held across Wyoming in celebration of National Fishing and Boating Week.

POWELL HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS COMPETE AT SKILLSUSA STATE CONFERENCE

BY TESSA BAKER
Tribune Features Editor

In areas ranging from photography to commercial baking to technical drafting, eight Powell High School students recently competed at the state SkillsUSA Leadership and Skills Conference in Casper.

The main focus of SkillsUSA is being job ready on day one, said Ashlyn Aguirre, a PHS sophomore.

"I like how they set that up to where they're using the competitive side of younger people and making it a learning experience," she said.

SkillsUSA offers students the chance to compete in a variety of areas that they're interested in pursuing.

"I really wanted to compete in CAD, and [SkillsUSA] was one of the only avenues I could take in order to do that," said Tate Barhaug, adding that the state competition was fun.

For the first time, PHS students competed in extemporaneous speaking, medical terminology and photography at the state conference, said Denise Laursen, SkillsUSA adviser.

Kaitlyn Church said she did SkillsUSA because she's in child development classes and wanted to see what it would be like to design her own lesson plan.

Aguirre said she appreciated the judges and their feedback at the state competition.

"They're going to help you through it and give you pointers to make it so you are even more ready for your job on day one," Aguirre said. "It also gives you so many career choice options."

Olivia Lobingier said she likes the job experience that SkillsUSA offers.

"They try to make it as much like a job you would have as possible," she said.

The following PHS students competed at the SkillsUSA Leadership and Skills Conference April 23-25 in Casper:

- Aguirre earned third in job interview and fourth in first aid/CPR.

- Barhaug finished fourth in extemporaneous speaking, and also competed in technical drafting.

- Jeremy Ackley-Burrs placed second in culinary arts.

- Natalie Birdsley earned fourth in culinary arts, and also competed in medical terminology, placing in the middle of the group.

- Maggie Cappiello competed in commercial baking.

- Heather Lieser earned second in the baking competition.

- Church finished third in early childhood education and also competed in job interview.

- Lobingier earned third place in photography.

The students were up against competitors from big schools like Casper, Cheyenne and Sheridan, as well as smaller schools, including Lovell and Rocky Mountain, said Laursen.

"It is so wonderful to see students do well," she said.

SkillsUSA students also completed a community service project, making kits with various wooden shapes that kids can use to build letters of the alphabet.

Barhaug and other CAD students drew the design in AutoCAD, then programmed a CNC (Computer Numerical Control) router to cut the various shapes. SkillsUSA students sanded, organized and bagged the kits.

The PHS students created 51 kits, with each set featuring 17 pieces.

"This has been an ongoing project for us for quite a while," said Mike Ursuy, who is also a SkillsUSA adviser at PHS. "It was a lot of work."

Last week, they gave the sets to children at Absaroka Head Start.

"It was great — they could see the end product of something we designed in CAD and we helped them out, too, so it was really nice," Ursuy said.
