

State legislation could kick-start hemp production

POWELL AREA GROWERS INTERESTED IN CROP

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

Wyoming farmers may soon have the opportunity to grow a new crop.

A bill making its way through the state Legislature would, at long last, allow producers to plant, harvest and process industrial hemp.

"It's going to give our farmers an opportunity to grow a crop that they can set their own prices with," Rep. Bunky Loucks, R-Casper, said on the House floor. Loucks is the lead sponsor of House Bill 171, also known as the Hemp Freedom Bill.

He called it "a great opportunity for the state," saying that "literally hundreds of farmers are interested" in hemp and that a half-dozen organizations are interested in building processing facilities in Wyoming.

Loucks specifically mentioned a Powell area group that wants to produce hemp "from the field to the table."

Hemp was a topic of interest among some of the growers who attended the Heart Mountain Irrigation District's annual meeting last week.

Mike Forman of Powell, the president of the Wyoming Crop Improvement Association, said he assumes the popular bill will pass the Legislature.

In advancing to the Senate, "it passed out of the House 60-0, which is something that almost never happens," Forman said.

City banners safe for now

FEES TO INCREASE

BY KEVIN KILLOUGH
Tribune News Editor

The Powell City Council decided that doing away with the city's Bent Street banner program just isn't going to fly.

The council unanimously voted down a possible repeal at Tuesday's regular meeting after supporters raised objections. Councilors also reported finding that most residents like the banners.

Instead of ending the program, the council voted to pursue an increase in fees, from the current $15 to $50.

The program allows community organizations to advertise their events on banners strung across Bent Street, near its intersection with Coulter Avenue. Commercial or political promotions are not allowed.

City Administrator Zane Logan had raised issues with the program at the Feb. 4 council meeting, saying the city's current fees covered only about a third of the labor costs the city incurs to hang the signs.

Logan also said the work created a potential safety hazard when workers were lifted in bucket trucks parked on the street. The signs also get shredded in Wyoming's winds, which doesn't always look attractive on the city's main downtown thoroughfare, he said.

The council voted unanimously at its Feb. 4 meeting to draft an ordinance repealing the program, while councilors sought more input on the issue. In discussions with constituents, however, council members said they found little support for the repeal.

Councilman Scott Mangold said residents he spoke with saw the banners as part of the town's tradition of advertising community events.

"They feel that this is hometown stuff," Mangold said.

Councilman Floyd Young said he spoke with eight people, and they all wanted to keep the banners.

The council members said residents were open to increasing the fees, so the city recoups the cost of hanging the banners.

"What I'm hearing, then, is it's OK to raise the price so we aren't subsidizing advertising," Mayor John Wetzel said.

Powell resident Marybeth Richardson agreed that raising the fees would be acceptable to the community organizations that utilize

Wyoming designates tough salamander as state amphibian

BY MARK DAVIS
Tribune Staff Writer

Salamanders don't often elicit feelings of admiration. A moist, yellow and brown soft-skinned salamander says "giggles" more than "cowboy tough." But make no mistake, the blotched tiger salamander is one tough customer. And now it's the state amphibian.

Gov. Mark Gordon signed a law Tuesday that puts the salamander on the same level with bison (the state mammal), western meadowlark (state bird) and even the horned toad (state reptile). Yet, not one of the wild amphibians will know of their newfound fame until spring — they hibernate through Wyoming's harsh winter. Plus, they're salamanders.

When the amphibians wake in April and scurry through spring squalls and residual snow to their favorite ponds, they probably won't notice many in the state cheering for their blotchy skin and amazing adaptability. They'll be too busy looking for a mate to feel the love for the species' new designation.

Science students at Pathfinder High School in Lander nominated the resilient amphibian. "We truly believe that the blotched tiger salamander is distinguished in its ability to thrive in Wyoming and in its contributions to so many Wyoming ecosystems," the students wrote to Gordon. "It should be recognized above and beyond its fellow amphibians for those distinctions."

You'll get no arguments from Wendy Estes-Zumpf, the state's top herpetologist at the Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

"Wyoming has a very harsh environment. The western tiger salamander has adapted to handle any condition the environment can hand out," Estes-Zumpf said.

The little critters can be found around most of the state, including in wetlands across the Big Horn Basin.

Park County jail video surveillance system to be replaced

BY CJ BAKER

With the Park County Detention Center's surveillance camera system reportedly at risk of permanently crashing, county commissioners have decided to upgrade sooner rather than later.

Although the project wasn't in this year's budget, commissioners voted

Tuesday to hire a Denver-area firm to replace the dozens of cameras and the recording equipment at the jail with modern technology.

County Chief Information Officer Mike Conners warned commissioners that, when one of the current DVR-like devices died, it was a struggle to find a replacement on eBay.

"The next failure, I can't even guarantee we're going to get this thing back up and running again," Conners said.

The system of cameras is used to track the activities and movements of inmates and guards across the facility, helping detention deputies spot conflicts and determine when to open and close doors.

"This is one of those tools that, without it, they can't run the jail, basically," Conners said, adding, "It's a huge part of what they do there — all day, every day."

The commission agreed to accept a $218,741.14 quote from CML Security of Erie, Colorado; the county hopes to save some money by purchasing another $4,700 worth of equipment on its own, for a total estimated cost of just less than $223,500.

"I don't like writing a check any more than anybody else does, but I think it's something that we've got to are likely three subspecies in Wyoming, but it's hard to tell the difference between them, Estes-Zumpf said.

One of the salamander's amazing features is the ability to choose whether it will grow legs.

"It can decide when to go through metamorphosis to be a land animal," Estes-Zumpf said.

Like all amphibians, the salamander begins life in water in the larval stage. It has gills and a tail. As they become adults — and if the water source remains viable — the salamander can decide to live its life under water. But if the pond is drying up, the species can grow legs and lungs and move to a new home.

"Sounds like a pretty good amphibian to support for our state amphibian doesn't it?" said state Sen. R.J. Kost, R-Powell. He voted in favor of the bill, which sailed through the Senate on a vote of 26-2, with two excused.

Kost was impressed with the research done by the Pathfinder students and their willingness to get involved in the political process. During their studies they discovered the state lacked a designated amphibian. They contacted Sen. Cale Case, R-Lander, to get the ball rolling.

While the bill was being considered in the state House, Rep. Bob Nicholas, R-Laramie, attempted to amend the legislation to designate the blotched tiger salamander as just the state salamander. The Pathfinder students, however, called foul.

"With regard to all other state vertebrates, there is only one representative for each class," an email from the students noted. The amendment eventually failed and the bill passed the House on a vote of 50-9, with one excused.

While the Big Horn Basin's lawmakers generally supported the legislation, Rep. Dan Laursen, R-Powell, voted no.

"In short, [I] did not believe this was a needed bill," Laursen said. "I think we could have spent time on other issues."

Hemp: Powell police chief says law enforcement does not oppose the legislation

Local Reps. Dan Laursen, R-Powell, David Northrup, R-Powell, and Jamie Flitner, R-Greybull, are co-sponsors of HB 171, along with Sens. Hank Coe, R-Cody and R.J. Kost, R-Powell. Powell Economic Partnership Executive Director Christine Bekes also lobbied for the bill in Cheyenne last week.

Hemp can be used in a host of ways, including as a food, forage, fabric or medication; advocates say it could prove more profitable for farmers than other crops.

However, it's also more controversial than commodities like sugar beets, barley or beans — until recently, the federal government generally considered hemp to be an illegal controlled substance. That's because hemp is a variation of the same plant (cannabis sativa) that produces marijuana. The key difference is that hemp contains very low levels of the plant's main psychoactive constituent, tetrahydrocannabinol (THC). In other words, rather than getting a high, "the only thing you get from smoking that stuff [hemp] is a burnt tongue," one lawmaker quipped last year.

HB 171 specifically says that all hemp grown in the state must have a THC content of no more than 0.3 percent. For comparison, strains of marijuana often have more than 30 times that amount of THC.

Eckerdt, the president of the Wyoming Association of Sheriffs and Chiefs of Police, said law enforcement does not oppose the legislation, but wants to make sure it's done right. For example, Eckerdt said the bill should allow for ways to verify that someone isn't growing or selling marijuana; he cited concern with a provision that says the state can only inspect a grower once a year. The chief also wants to be sure there aren't opportunities for people possessing or transporting marijuana to get off the hook by claiming they thought it was hemp.

"Don't leave loopholes," Eckerdt said of his position. The bill does say that, in order to receive a license to grow hemp, the people involved in the operation can't have been convicted of a felony controlled substance violation within the last 10 years.

Lawmakers passed a law in 2017 that allowed the state to begin researching hemp. However, they didn't provide any funding for the testing equipment that the Wyoming Department of Agriculture says it needs to check a crop's THC content. Rep. Northrup led an effort last year to amend the state's budget and buy the equipment.

"... if we don't get going this year, we'll lose the growing season and it will be another year before we get this going," Northrup warned last year. In a down farm economy, he said the addition of hemp would be "great."

However, the funding ultimately didn't make it in the budget and there was little movement on the issue.

Things changed in December, though, when Congress passed and President Donald Trump signed the $867 billion Farm Bill. Provisions of the bill effectively legalized hemp, allowing hemp-derived products to be transported across state lines for commercial purposes and removing restrictions on their sale and possession — as long as THC levels remain below 0.3 percent.

That's what spurred HB 171 this session, which would create a set of rules for growing hemp in Wyoming.

"If we don't pass this bill, our folks can still grow hemp, but they do it under the federal regulations, not state regulations," Rep. Eric Barlow, R-Gillette, explained to his colleagues. "So if we want to have control closer to home, and impact how this is actually done in our state, we

Terri Moran

(Aug. 14, 1958 - Feb. 14, 2019)

Terri Moran, 60, of Shoshoni passed away on Thursday, Feb. 14, 2019, at the Help for Health Hospice Home in Riverton, Wyoming, after a valiant battle with pancreatic cancer.

Terri Leigh Caines was born in Basin on Aug. 14, 1958, to Tom and Pennie Caines and grew up in Powell.

She attended Central Wyoming College and the Chadron State College on-line program where she earned her bachelor's degree in psychology with a CAP certification (Certified Addiction Practitioner).

She married Steve Moran in Riverton, and they shared over 29 years together. Terri worked in the different positions with domestic violence, drug court, as an in-patient and out-patient substance abuse counselor. She also worked actively with holistic and guided mediation modalities.

She was a member of the ABATE Motorcycle Club for over 10 years. She was also a member of the 12 Step Community. Terri enjoyed riding motorcycles which included poker runs and trips to Deadwood and Sturgis, fishing, camping and spending time with family. She was a Purebred Boxer breeder for many years and truly loved it.

Terri is survived by Steve Moran of Shoshoni; son Tom Moran of Mandan, North Dakota; mother Pennie Caines of Shoshoni; stepdaughter Christy Reems and husband, Jared of Killdeer, North Dakota; stepson Scott Moran and wife Missy of Lincoln, North Dakota; sister Joni Oswald and family of Billings, Montana; and grandchildren, Reid, Morgan, Alicia, Grace, Brooke, Michael, and Terry Joe.

She was preceded in death by her son Zeb Sand, and father Tom Caines.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to Help for Health Hospice Home (Riverton, Wyoming) or 3-Dog Rescue Pet Shelter (Cody, Wyoming) in care of Davis Funeral Home, 2203 West Main Street, Riverton, WY 82501.

Services will be held at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 23, at the First Presbyterian Church, 2025 23rd St in Cody, WY in the fellowship hall. A reception will follow.

Online condolences may be sent to the family at www.TheDavisFuneralHome.com. Arrangements under the direction of Davis Funeral Home.

Cody Labs expected to sell soon

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

Cody Laboratories is expected to sell to a new owner by July.

The Cody pharmaceutical manufacturer's parent company, Lannett Company, announced last fall that it was selling off the business, which creates active pharmaceutical ingredients for generic medications.

Lannett CEO Tim Crew said this month that the company expects to finalize "the transition of Cody Labs ... before the end of the current fiscal year," which concludes on June 30.

On a Feb. 6 conference call with investors, Crew offered no details about who might buy the company.

Lannett officials pegged the value of Cody Labs' inventory, equipment and other assets at roughly $36.5 million last summer; that includes the company's facilities on Cody's

Yellowstone Avenue and Road 2AB.

The sale is part of cost-cutting measures and a shift in direction at Lannett. The generic drug maker had planned a more than $50 million expansion of its operations in Cody to put more of a focus on making painkilling opioids. With the project expected to add more than 50 jobs in an industry uncommon to the state, the State of Wyoming had agreed to provide a $23 million loan for the project.

However, after Crew took over Lannett in late 2017, the company began focusing on paying down its debt and shorter-term projects. It halted construction at Cody Labs' manufacturing facility on Road 2AB and announced last June that, instead of adding new jobs, it would be laying off about 50 of its roughly 130 workers in Cody.

Combined with the shuttering of Lannett facilities in Philadelphia and other layoffs and cost-cutting measures across the company, Crew said Lannett expects to save around $33 million.

"These changes are never easy, but important to support our future growth plans," he said. "We again sincerely thank our former colleagues for their meaningful contributions to Lannett."

Lannett saw its stock plummet to as low as $3.33 a share last fall after losing a key contract, but it's since rebounded and traded as high as $9.68 a share on Thursday.

In Wednesday's conference call, Crew announced record net sales from the last quarter. He said Lannett cut costs and added revenues — predicting that 17 newly launched products will bring in at least $75 million this fiscal year with a gross margin of at least 35 percent.

"To paraphrase Mark Twain, the news of our company's travails has been greatly exaggerated," Crew said. "More to the point, we are feeling quite good about the current state of our business, the progress we've made over the last several quarters and our future prospects."

'These changes are never easy, but important to support our future growth plans.'

the program to advertise their events — and she stressed how important the signs were to getting the word out.

At a quilt show in Cody, Richardson conducted a survey of attendees to see how they learned of the event. She said newspaper advertisements were first, but banner ads were the second most-cited source.

She also explained that alternative methods of street advertising weren't adequate. Ground-level signs on the side of Coulter Avenue aren't easily seen by drivers, and vehicles in the right lane can block the signs from the view of people traveling in the left lane.

"I think the banner has value," she said.

She also questioned if the issues raised about the banners were really that important. Richardson said she was unaware of any injuries to city workers hanging banners, and she had a banner up for six weeks that didn't become a tattered eyesore.

"I don't know that's much of an issue," she said.

Richardson also said tourists passing through town responded well to the banners.

"Anything we can do for tourism, I'm all over it," she said.

Concerns were also raised over Pepsi's sponsorship of the banners.

Speaking after the meeting, Logan said the company used to freely provide kits that groups can use to create their own banner ads, with a Pepsi logo on the side. Logan said at some point, the company began to charge a small fee for the kits. In keeping with the spirit of the program, the council is going to consider if this sponsorship is appropriate or should be expanded to other sponsors.

Powell Economic Partnership Executive Director Christine Bekes said the issues raised about the program relate to a larger issue about signage regulations. Bekes said that needs to be considered as the city moves forward on updating city plans.

The council asked City Attorney Sandee Kitchen to draft a different ordinance for the fee increase, which will have its first reading at the next council meeting on March 4.

IN OUR OPINION

Celebrating our future

When Future Farmers of America started in 1928, its mission was to prepare the next generations for the challenges of feeding a growing population.

Today, we are part of that larger population they planned for all those years ago, and it's likely every American has eaten food grown by FFA alumni.

While the mission of FFA has expanded over the past 90 years, at its core, the group still exists to provide the next generation with an agricultural education. The organization's far-reaching impact is being celebrated across the country during National FFA Week, which continues through Saturday.

For members of the Powell-Shoshone FFA Chapter, this year is especially exciting as plans for a new agriculture facility move forward. The new facility — to be built just north of Powell High School — will give students opportunities to learn a variety of hands-on lessons in agriculture and even raise livestock there.

While students may learn about calving, equine dentistry or growing barley, not every FFA student aspires to become a farmer or a rancher. Some may want to be engineers, business owners, teachers or nurses — and all are welcome in FFA.

To reflect the diversity of FFA members and new opportunities in ag, the group changed its name to the National FFA Organization in 1988. The letters still stand for Future Farmers of America, "but we are the Future Biologists, Future Chemists, Future Engineers and Future Entrepreneurs of America, too," FFA says on its website.

Whatever a student is interested in — medicine, technology, science or business — there's likely a career opportunity in agriculture. PHS ag teacher Bryce Meyer said he wants to expose students to as many of those opportunities as he can.

"It might spark some interest so maybe they have a little bit more direction when they graduate from high school," Meyer said.

A lesson in the greenhouse may lead a student to study agronomy and another floral design, while caring for a sick lamb may inspire another teen to become a veterinarian.

And some students may decide to become farmers or ranchers — which is a good thing, especially considering the average age of U.S. farmers is 58.

It's encouraging to see the Powell-Shoshone FFA Chapter going strong with dozens of members, and we believe the new agriculture facility will draw even more students into ag classes. Though a lot has changed since FFA first formed in 1928, it's still vitally important for young people to pursue careers in agriculture to feed the generations to come.

I gave up on big city dreams for small town heart

I didn't plan to be a small-town community journalist, but now I can't imagine doing anything else. Outside non-profits, there are few other ways to earn a living fulfilling a vital community need. And sadly, it's a service fewer communities enjoy than ever before.

In college, I had originally planned on being a foreign correspondent. I imagined my career would have me traveling to exotic locations to cover war zones and natural disasters. I wanted to make a difference in the world, and I wanted some adventure doing it.

After finishing my graduate studies, I moved to Washington, D.C., which I thought would be a great place to break into journalism. As it turns out, the nation's capital is a pretty tough job market for fledgling journalists. Competing with Columbia and American University grads for two years, I scored a single interview for a writing position.

The editor who was kind enough to interview me for that position was also kind enough to give me some career advice when he turned me down for the job: Without any experience, I wasn't going to get my foot in the door at big-city publications, he warned.

He suggested I look at reporting opportunities in small towns, where they would love to have someone with some talent and a solid work ethic. Then, I could get some experience and move to a larger market.

Eventually, I landed a reporting position at a weekly newspaper in Tioga, North Dakota, a town of around 2,000 people. Just up the road from Tioga was the Jensens' farm, which was decimated by one of the largest land-based oil spills in American history.

The company took full responsibility for the mess and initiated a gargantuan effort at its expense to clean up nearly 900,000 gallons of oil from what was once a productive wheat farm.

The accident was covered by all the national media, including the New York Times and CNN. The spill was a year old by the time I was hired and came to interview the Jensens for a follow-up story. The couple who owned the farm, Patty and Steve Jensen, was by that point pretty tired of interviews.

One of the hardest parts of being hounded constantly by reporters, they told me, was how agenda-driven the media could be. The Jensens have a lot to say about preventing these disasters from happening, but most of the national media just want to demonize the entire industry, using the Jensens' story as a platform for their cause.

Even if I were inclined to use personal tragedies to advance my own agendas — and I'm not — the nature of community journalism makes that kind of insincerity difficult. After the story was published, I didn't fly off to some city thousands of miles away. I would regularly encounter Mrs. Jensen at the grocery store.

This kind of personal relationship with sources creates an incentive for local reporters to get the story right and to balance perspectives. The people you write about are your neighbors. The decisions of local leaders personally impact your own life.

That's not to say all local reporters are angels and never make mistakes, but it is to say they have a lot more skin in the game.

In the era of "fake news," transmitted and reproduced by the millions in seconds, your local reporters are often much more reliable sources of information.

Yet, community journalism is going the way of the milk man. A study last year by the University of North Carolina found that 1,300 communities in the U.S. had lost all local news coverage. Since 2004, about 1,800 of 9,000 newspapers had merged or gone out of business. Many of those still publishing had greatly scaled back their coverage.

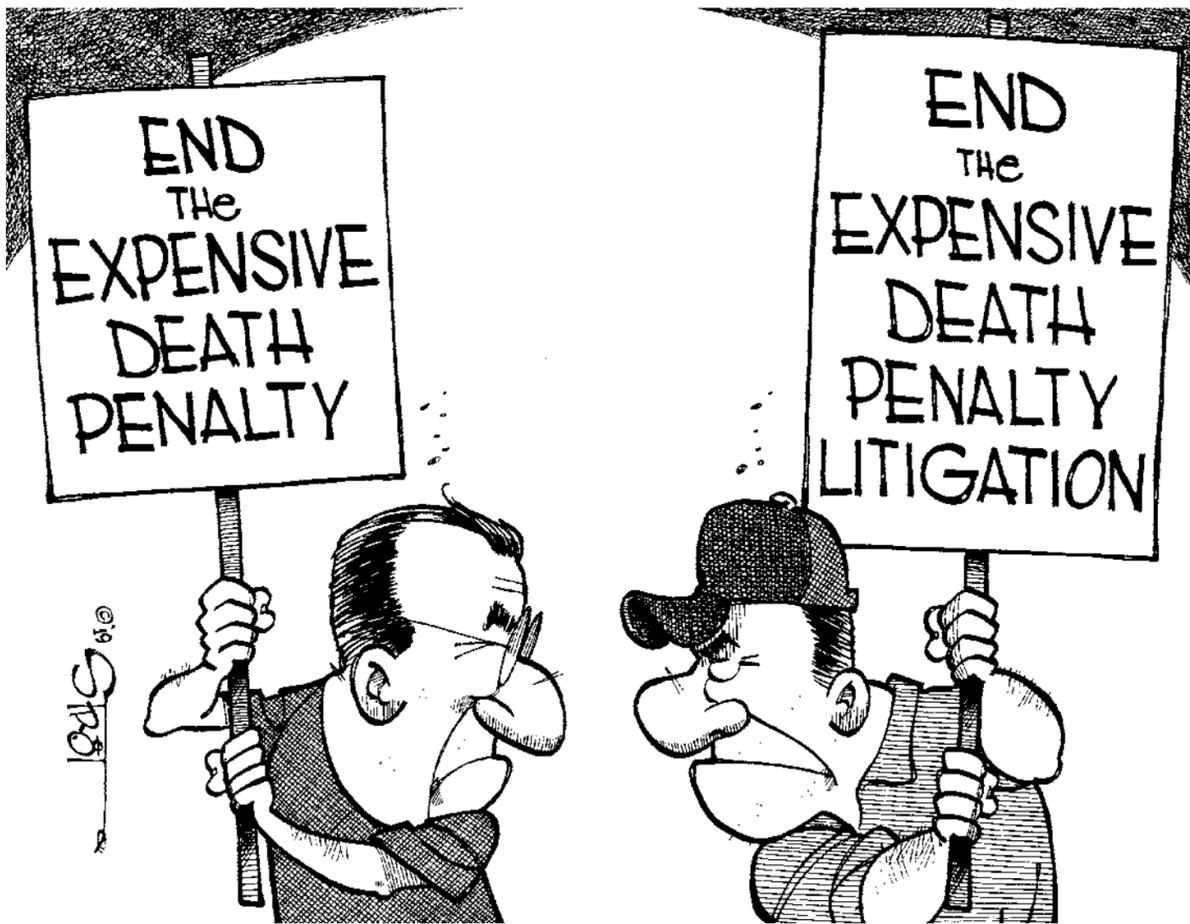

Rather than move on to bigger opportunities, I found community journalism suited me. While lacking in the excitement and glamor of big-city reporting, it's much more honest and democratic.

When interviewing for the position at the Powell Tribune, I saw a newsroom that is committed to that kind of quality community journalism. And I'm excited for this new opportunity to continue that tradition. I hope to make a living at it well into retirement.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Green New Deal addresses serious issue of climate change

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the column written by Sen. John Barrasso on Feb. 7, regarding climate change and reduction of carbon emissions. I am not going to argue point for point on everything that he said. He barely acknowledges that "the climate is changing and we collectively have a responsibility to do something about it." He specifically avoids the cause or severity of global warming. His main argument is that we will reduce emission of greenhouse gases while continuing to burn (Wyoming's) fossil fuels for "decades to come" through "investment, invention, and innovation" rather than "crushing regulations." This is the same old tired dogma that the GOP always spews.

Recently, Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez and more than 60 co-sponsors introduced House Resolution 109, the Green New Deal. There is a corresponding bill in the Senate. There is a great amount of hateful, unwarranted, misogynistic and inaccurate propaganda on what this legislation proposes. A good example is the political cartoon by Wayne Stroot in the Feb. 19 Tribune, showing all negative and fictitious things that conservatives claim will result from it.

The following is a link to the actual text of the legislation: <https://bit.ly/2MV5JVQ> Below is a paraphrased synopsis.

The first part of the bill describes the critical nature of global warming citing two government reports, the "Special Report on Global Warming of 1.5 °C" by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change and the November 2018 "Fourth National Climate Assessment Report." These found that human activity is the dominant cause of global warming over the past century. The change in climate is causing rising sea levels, increasing wildfires, greater severity of storms, droughts, heat waves and other detrimental environmental effects, concomitant threats to human life, community health, and critical infrastructure. It is estimated that the U.S. will experience $500 billion in lost yearly economic output by 2100 and $1 trillion in damage to public infrastructure and coastal land. There will be a loss of almost all of the world's coral reefs.

Science has unequivocally shown that mean global temperatures must be kept below 1.5 degree Celsius above pre-industrial levels to mitigate against the worst effects of climate change. This requires a 40 to 60 percent reduction in global greenhouse gas emissions from human sources by 2030 and net zero emissions by 2050.

Since the United States (with 5 percent of global population) is historically responsible for 20 percent of the greenhouse gas emissions, we must take the lead in reducing these through economic transformation. There are multiple related problems in the U.S., including declining life expectancy, decades of wage stagnation, anti-labor practices, loss of manufacturing jobs, reduction of social-economic mobility, inadequate resources for public sector workers, and the greatest income inequality since the 1920s. Climate change disproportionately affects the poor, minorities, elderly, children, indigenous peoples, depopulated rural and deindustrialized communities (referred to as "front-line and vulnerable communities"). Climate change is a threat to national security.

Therefore, the House resolution says it is the duty of the federal government to create the "Green New Deal" to achieve net-zero greenhouse gas emissions through fair, just economic transition for all workers; to create millions of high wage jobs for economic security; to invest in U.S. infrastructure and sustainable industry.

These goals should be accomplished via a 10-year national mobilization with several requirements. These include spurring massive growth in clean manufacturing, removing as much pollution and greenhouse gases as technologically feasible, and investing in existing manufacturing and industry. All power needs will be met with clean, renewable energy sources, improving energy efficiency, upgrading existing buildings and better efficiency of new construction.

Agriculture and ranching will also be addressed by working collaboratively with the people in these sectors of the economy to remove as much pollution and gases as feasible, develop sustainable family farming, better land use practices, and a more sustainable food system.

The transportation system will be improved by investing in zero-emission infrastructure, manufacturing, affordable public transit and high-speed rail.

Other projects include management of the long term adverse health effects of climate change, removal of CO2 from the atmosphere by low tech proven methods such as land preservation and reforestation, restoring damaged ecosystems, building resiliency against climate related disasters, and promoting the international exchange of technology, expertise etc.

Sustainable employment will be addressed by ensuring the use of democratic and participatory processes that are inclusive of and led by frontline and vulnerable communities and workers to plan, implement, and administer the Green New Deal mobilization at the local level and the creation of high-quality union jobs that pay prevailing wages, hires local workers, offers training and advancement opportunities, and guarantees wage and benefit parity for workers affected by the transition.

Other issues to be addressed include workers rights, fair trade practices, workplace safety, the protection of public lands, fair commerce and business practices free of monopolies and unfair competition.

Finally, the ultimate outcome would ensure that all people of the United States have affordable, safe housing, economic security, high quality healthcare, clean air, water, affordable healthy food and access to nature.

This resolution is a non-binding but important vision of the seriousness of climate change and a framework for the necessary steps to be taken over time to address it. The fundamental needs of all people and interest groups and the practical feasibility of projects are considered. The status quo is unacceptable. The Republican Party is owned by the fossil fuel industry and will not do anything to solve the global warming problem.

Our planet is heading for catastrophe. There is not much time left. We need to act now.

4-H allowed to keep Powell secretary

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

After questioning whether the position is completely necessary, Park County commissioners are allowing the 4-H program to keep a full-time secretary in Powell. However, the new hire may be required to help out in the county's events department when the 4-H work is in a lull.

Commissioners had some debate on Feb. 5 before voting to allow Park County 4-H/Youth Educator Tycee Mohler to refill the position, which became vacant earlier this month.

Mohler told the board that, when 4-H went without a Powell secretary last summer, it "put us behind quite drastically."

"Without this person, I have to devote more of my time to program management and less to interacting with the kids and teaching, so it is a huge help for us to have that," she said. Park County 4-H also has a secretary in Cody, which Mohler said is consistent with similarly-sized programs in Wyoming.

She also said it's important to have someone at the fairgrounds in Powell to greet people who stop by. However, Mohler also acknowledged that, in December and January in particular, "there's not something to keep them busy the entire time they're in the office."

Further, Park County Events Coordinator Teecee Barrett — whose office sits near the 4-H space in Powell — said the foot traffic at the 4-H office "is pretty much nothing until May-June," in the run-up to the county fair.

Barrett also charged that previous secretaries had "a ton of down time and [did] personal things" while on the job, telling commissioners she wanted any new hire to be held to county employee standards. Mohler said she'd only recently learned of the issues raised by Barrett and "I have some plans to implement things to make sure that does not continue to occur."

Commissioner Chairman Jake Fulkerson said it's hard to manage someone in a position during slow periods — particularly when they're 30 miles away. "This is not an easy one," he said of the decision over whether to fill the post.

Commissioner Lee Livingston said he'd feel more comfortable if the job was made part-time, noting the "fairly substantial savings" that come from not having to offer benefits.

However, Clerk Colleen Renner said previous efforts to make it a three-quarter position concluded that "it needed to be a full-time [post]."

Commissioner Lloyd Thiel wondered if the board could approve the position now and revisit the subject at budget time — but a couple of his colleagues noted that could present a difficult situation for whoever is hired.

Ultimately, the commission voted unanimously to allow Mohler to hire a replacement in Powell.

"You do need that face," said Commissioner Dossie Overfield. "I think people still like [to see] someone if they walk in the door and have questions — especially before fair."

However, commissioners also indicated they would like the new secretary to perhaps help out in the events office during slow periods, asking that an arrangement be put in writing.

While the University of Wyoming helps fund Mohler's position, the secretaries are the county's responsibility. Job interviews are set to be conducted today (Thursday).

For Buffalo Bill's birthday, Center of the West offers free admission

Each year, the Buffalo Bill Center of the West, along with the whole town of Cody, celebrates the birthday of namesake William F. "Buffalo Bill" Cody. Though it's a couple days ahead of Buffalo Bill's Feb. 26 birthday, the Center will offer free admission on Sunday, Feb. 24, in honor of the occasion.

Volunteer Mike Parker of Powell will be on hand in the Center's Buffalo Bill Museum. He'll be set up near the printing press exhibit — which features the Babcock press that Buffalo Bill purchased in 1899 for the Cody Enterprise. Using his own small printing press, Parker will instruct visitors on the art of printing and assist them with creating a small souvenir to take home.

On Tuesday, Feb. 26 — the Cody founder's actual birthday — members of Cody High School's FFA chapter will host a wreath-laying ceremony at Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney's sculpture "Buffalo Bill — The Scout." It's located just north of the Center of the West.

All are invited to this long-running annual event, which begins at 11 a.m.

MARY FLITNER

Local author to speak in Cody Monday night

Author Mary Budd Flitner will discuss her new book, "My Ranch, Too: A Wyoming Memoir," during Monday's meeting of the Pahaska Corral of Westerners.

The gathering starts with a no-host dinner at 6 p.m. at the Governors Room in the Irma Hotel in Cody, followed by Flitner's presentation around 7 p.m. Both the meal and the program are open to the public, but due to limited seating, non-members must RSVP by emailing Lynn Houze at ljhcody@tct-west.net.

Flitner's ranching heritage began in 1879, when her great-grandfather drove a herd of cattle from Eureka, Nevada, to the Green River Valley of Wyoming.

Flitner grew up on the ranch he established and married into a Big Horn Basin ranching family. She and her husband Stan have lived in the Shell Valley since that time, raising four children.

"I wrote my book to preserve stories from my childhood, continuing through my adult life as a rancher near Shell, Wyoming," Flitner said. "I soon realized that, beyond tales of ranch life, characters and cowboy ways, the book is a compilation brought from observing people, business, livestock, politics, attitudes, and dynamics which occur in everyone's life, in every profession."

Flitner notes that ranchers today must consider "habitat and natural resources, riparian areas and similar topics that have become part of a necessary vocabulary for modern-day land use."

Stan and Mary have remained in the ranching business, and they say they've never stopped seeking opportunities to strengthen their footing in the livestock business. In addition to ranching, Mary served on the Board of The Ruckelshaus Institute, a division of the Haub School of Environment and Natural Resources at the University of Wyoming, as a Wyoming Game and Fish Commissioner and as a trustee of the Buffalo Bill Center of the West.

The Pahaska Corral of Westerners is the local chapter of Westerner International, an organization dedicated to stimulating interest and research in the history of the American West.

LOCAL SNOWPACK LOOKING NORMAL

Although there's less snow than last year, the 2018-19 snow season appears to be shaping up as a pretty normal one.

Data from Wyoming Snow Telemetry (SNOTEL) sites suggests that the amount of snow that's fallen so far in the Shoshone, Bighorn and Yellowstone river basins is right in-line with the totals recorded over the last 30 years.

As of Feb. 14, the snow water equivalent stood at 99 percent of median in the Shoshone and Yellowstone river basin and at 104 percent of median for the Bighorn River Basin. If the local weather has seemed drier, that's because snowpack in all three basins was running well above normal at this same point in 2017 and 2018.

Across Wyoming, measurements at the SNOTEL sites were ranging between 90 and 127 percent of median last week.

"There's been a considerable evening out of the snowpack across the state, with all basins now in the green or better (90 percent or better)," said Ken Von Buettner, a hydrologic technician with the federal Natural Resources Conservation Service in Casper.

The state as a whole stood at 101 percent of median on Feb. 14, Von Buettner said, down from 113 percent last year and 146 in 2017.

Greybull gas leak leads to mobile home explosion

GREYBULL (WNE) — An explosion that destroyed a mobile home and injured one of its adult occupants was likely caused by a natural gas leak, according to Greybull Fire Chief Bill Scott.

Greybull firefighters and police officers responded to the mobile home at 8:52 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 9, following a report of an explosion and a fire. The mobile home sits right behind the Wheels Motel, on property owned by Daniel T. Rice.

According to the Greybull Police Department, the first officers on scene detected a strong odor of natural gas coming from the trailer. The four people inside the trailer at the time of the explosion managed to exit safely and were outside when the first responders arrived. One of them, a woman, sustained burns to her face and right hand.

"All parties stated that they had smelled an odor of gas and had to re-light the pilot light on the water heater earlier in the evening," according to the report.

Scott said a state fire investigator confirmed that a natural gas leak was to blame, but added, "It still hasn't been determined what, specifically, caused the explosion, in terms of the source that ignited it. It was definitely a large explosion, though."

"The fire investigator emphasized how lucky we were that more gas wasn't involved, given the close proximity to the Wheels Motel and the other trailer houses," Scott said.

PANTHER GYM FEATURES FLAG THAT DESCENDS FROM CEILING

A Grand Old Flag

Old Glory has a new place of honor in the Panther Gym.

Thanks to a community effort, a 12-foot-by-18-foot American flag was installed at the gym. The flag drops from the rafters before the National Anthem at sporting events.

Andy Metzler saw a similar flag displayed at Lander High School during a volleyball game in September and brought the idea to Powell.

"The flag we had was pretty small and stuck up in the corner of the gym," Metzler said. "I think the American flag should be more important than that. After seeing it for the first time, I thought that it would be a great addition to the Panther Gym."

Metzler started looking into what it would take to get a large flag at PHS, but after seeing the price tag, he wasn't sure if he wanted to continue with the idea.

"My mother did not like that answer," Metzler said. "She said, 'If you get 100 dollars from enough people, you can do it. Let's get started.' So we started asking. Everyone we asked was happy to donate and thought it was a great idea."

About 60 community members donated $100 each, raising the roughly $6,000 needed for the flag, which was installed in December.

"We also had to build the bracket that it hangs from," Metzler said.

Extra money was used for the metal and other things needed to hang the flag, he said. While he wasn't expecting to have to install it, Metzler said he had a couple of friends who were glad to help.

"I think it looks awesome in our gym," Metzler said. "A good National Anthem before a competition still gives me goosebumps."

Since the flag was installed,

Metzler said everyone seems to enjoy it, as he's heard numerous comments from donors, parents, school staff and students.

"I couldn't have done it without everyone who donated, and all the help with the installation," he said.

AARP Foundation tax help available at senior centers through mid-April

Beginning this month and continuing through mid-April, AARP Foundation is providing free tax assistance and preparation in Powell and Cody through its Tax-Aide program. At the Powell Senior Citizens Center, appointment times are available from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. every Friday until April 12.

Tax-Aide started in 1968 with just four volunteers at one site. Today, nearly 35,000 volunteers serve low- to moderate-income taxpayers at almost 5,000 locations. There's no fee, and AARP membership is not required.

In Wyoming, there are 16 sites — including at the Powell and Cody senior centers.

More than 2,835 Wyoming residents had their tax returns completed through the AARP Tax-Aide program last year, with 212 returns in Evanston and Mountain View alone. Those statewide efforts helped Wyoming residents receive $2.3 million in refunds they had coming their way.

"I do this because I love to help others. This is one thing I am capable of doing that helps so many people in my community," said Lyman resident Sara Narramore, the Regional Administration Adviser for the Tax-Aide Program. "These tax services can be very high-priced and this service can help seniors with those costs."

Tax-Aide volunteers are trained and IRS-certified each year to ensure they know about and understand the latest changes to the U.S. Tax Code. In 2018, the program's volunteers helped 2.5 million people navigate complicated tax codes, ensure proper credits and deductions, and file their federal and state tax returns. Taxpayers who used Tax-Aide received $1.3 billion in income tax refunds and more than $212 million in Earned Income Tax Credits. They also avoided tax preparation fees and pitches for high-interest tax credit or refund loans.

"Taxes are something that people are afraid of getting wrong and once they find out we are trained by the IRS they are excited and they tell their friends and it builds and builds every year," said Narramore.

She suggests calling your local senior center — the Powell center can be reached at 754-4223 or visited at 248 N. Gilbert St. — to make an appointment to meet with a Tax-Aide volunteer and get an intake sheet, which should be filled out prior to the appointment. Narramore noted the service isn't just for seniors, but for everyone, with some limitations.

Narramore said AARP is also looking for those interested in volunteering for the Tax-Aide program in various roles.

For more information, including which documents to bring, visit www.aarp.org/taxaide or call 1-888-227-7669.

ROCK OF AGES

Decked out in 1980s fashion and plenty of hair-spray, Powell High School theatre students will perform "Rock of Ages" this weekend.

Built around classic rock songs from the '80s, the musical features songs from Bon Jovi, Styx, Journey, Pat Benatar, Twisted Sister and other rock bands.

"Mostly, we chose the play because we believe that the students and our audience will appreciate the music," said Bob Hunt, the play's director.

Hunt said he grew up listening to '80s hair bands, and Jeff Greaham, the vocal director, has experience touring with bands that played the songs in the show.

'There is still something in the music that resonates with high school students, and it will certainly resonate with parents who come to see the show.'

Director

"Everyone knew songs like 'Don't Stop Believin,' 'We Built this City' and 'Every Rose Has its Thorn,'" Hunt said. "However, there were a few songs that not all of the students knew."

Students also had to dust off their dancing shoes as they learned new dance routines. The choreographer, Madisen McDonald, "does a really nice job with the dance numbers," Hunt said. Two student dance captains, Jaxton Braten and Rachel Bozell, also have helped.

"I am amazed at how quickly they pick up the choreography," Hunt said.

He said the cast has a nice mixture of students who have been in past PHS plays and those performing in their first play.

"It is also just a really nice group of students," Hunt said. "They really support each other and have great positive energy."

The curtain rises at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights at the PHS Auditorium. Tickets are $6 for general admission and $5 for students.

Jail: Current surveillance system around 13 or 14 years old

do," Commissioner Joe Tilden said of the upgrade.

Commissioner Lloyd Thiel agreed that "it's got to happen."

County policy calls for agencies to bid out any purchases over $5,000, but commissioners opted to simply hire CML Security.

Connors said only a handful of firms in the entire country specialize in surveillance camera systems for corrections facilities. Connors said he hadn't looked at other firms, saying that CML Security was the closest vendor — therefore potentially being the easiest to get to Cody for maintenance — and "they come pretty highly recommended."

Connors also suggested that going out for bids would likely bring in a lot of proposals from companies that have never worked in a jail and aren't familiar with the security protocols.

CML Security will remove and replace 60 analog cameras with digital, high-definition ones, while a 61st will be added to a medical observation area that currently has poor coverage, Connors said. A new recording device will include eight, six-terabyte hard drives that will be able to save at least 45 days worth of footage. Four workstations will also be installed, each featuring one to three 32-inch monitors.

Beyond the expensive equipment, a big part of the work involves replacing the wiring — removing coaxial cable and pulling in faster Category 6 cables, Connors said.

Given the cameras' critical importance, they'll be replaced in stages, he said, so deputies will remain able to keep an eye on inmates at all times.

While calling the cost a "huge amount of money" that "just makes your head hurt," Connors said the current system has "more than paid for itself" over the years by debunking potential lawsuits and assisting in criminal prosecutions.

He added that surveillance systems are generally expected to last seven to 10 years; the current one is around 13 or 14 years old.

"We more than got our money's worth out of it, for sure," Connors said.

Heating bill assistance available

With cold weather and snow still in the forecast, most Wyoming families will be turning up their thermostats. However, if low-income Wyoming families are wondering how they will heat their homes through the remaining winter months, the Low-Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP) is accepting applications through Feb. 28.

LIEAP is a federally funded program, administered by the Wyoming Department of Family Services, which can help low-income families and people on fixed-incomes pay their heating bills. LIEAP eligibility can also lead to help with weatherizing qualified homes.

LIEAP applications are available at local DFS offices and at www.wyolieap.com/Application/. Applicants may call the LIEAP intake office at 1-800-246-4221 to request a form.

Applications must be submitted by Feb. 28. Applicants may mail completed applications and supporting documents to P.O. Box 827, Cheyenne, WY 82003. Applications may also be scanned and emailed to lieapinfo@thealignteam.org, submitted on the website or faxed to 307-778-3943.

FIRST CONFERENCE WIN AT CENTRAL WYOMING

LADY TRAPPERS WIN ON ROAD, STUMBLE AT HOME

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

After six weeks of close and not-so-close contests, the Northwest College women's basketball team finally shed the monkey on its back. The Lady Trappers won their first conference game of the season last week at Central Wyoming, 68-66.

"We finally played a whole four quarters and we did it as a team," said NWC sophomore Tayla Sayer. "Everyone had a role to play and executed it. It's an awesome feeling to win a game after the hard work that has been put in all season."

The celebration was cut a little short, however, as NWC fell to Region IX North-leading Casper on Saturday, 82-46.

The 2018-19 regular season is quickly winding down, with the Lady Trappers playing their final home game of the year Saturday against Western Wyoming. NWC is trying to avoid going into the Region IX Tournament as the No. 8 seed.

"We have to get everybody healthy," said NWC head coach Camden Levett. "We still have a chance to fight for that seventh seed, and that's pretty important. ... We're in front of our home crowd that's been there for us all year. And with Saturday being Sophomore Night, we have plenty of stuff to play for."

LADY TRAPPERS 68, CENTRAL WYOMING 66

After an 11-game losing skid to start 2019, the Lady Trappers (3-24, 1-11) finally found themselves on the winning end of things, beating Central Wyoming (9-18, 3-9) in Riverton, 68-66. NWC avenged a 74-69 loss to the Lady Rustlers in Powell last

ROAD LOSS AT CENTRAL WYOMING, AT HOME TO CASPER COLLEGE

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

With the regular season in its final week, the Northwest College men's basketball team is looking to salvage what's left after a pair of losses to Region IX North foes last week.

On the road at Central Wyoming College on Feb. 13, the Rustlers exacted a measure of revenge on the Trappers from a loss last month, winning the rematch 92-75.

NWC followed that with a home contest against the No. 10 team in the country on Saturday, with Casper College making short work of the Trappers, 112-72.

The two losses dropped the Trappers to seventh in the North, with home games against Sheridan and Western Wyoming this week to close out the regular season. NWC head coach Dawud Abdur-Rahkman said he's hoping to have a healthy roster of players for Saturday's game.

"That will be a big day for us in a lot of respects," he said. "It's the last day of the regular season, and it's Sophomore Night. And the Army National Guard is sponsoring the event, so it's going to be pretty special. And hopefully we can cap it off with a win."

CENTRAL WYOMING 92, TRAPPERS 75

Despite having the game's leading scorer and with three players in double digits, the Trappers couldn't find an answer against Central Wyoming, falling to the Rustlers 92-75.

The Trappers were without guard Kyle Brown and 7-footer Axel Okongo due to injuries, and Reme Torbert was still recovering from the flu.

"That was just a tough night for us," Abdur-Rahkman said. "Central Wyoming has gotten better. I'm not sure how much better, because we're down some

JORDAN WINS ROCKY MOUNTAIN DISTRICT TITLE AT 285 POUNDS

BY DON COGGER

Northwest College freshman grappler Daniel Jordan wrestled his way to a district championship at 285 pounds over the weekend at the Rocky Mountain District Tournament.

Competing in Sterling, Colorado, the Trappers finished third as a team with 54 points. Meanwhile, five NWC wrestlers qualified for the NJCAA National Tournament, scheduled for March 1-2 in Council Bluffs, Iowa. Joining Jordan at nationals will be: Boburjon Berdiyoyrov, who took second at 133 pounds; Yair Moran, the runner-up at 174 pounds; two-time national qualifier Palmer Schafer at 149 pounds, who earned a wild card bid after finishing third; and Porter Fox at 184 pounds, who also earned a wild card.

"We had a good tournament," said NWC head coach Jim Zeigler. "We started off slow, but the guys wrestled hard, we had a couple of really good performances. We talked about being able to beat someone that they weren't expected to beat, like a higher-seeded kid. We knew we would need some upsets, and we got them."

Western Wyoming took the team title with 109.5 points, qualifying 10 wrestlers for nationals. Northeastern Junior College finished second with 91.5 points, qualifying nine for nationals.

NWC's Jordan was the surprise of the tournament, winning a close 4-3 decision in the heavyweight division over Western Wyoming's Landon Brown. Brown had won the previous two matches between the two wrestlers, and came into the district tournament ranked No. 3 in the nation.

"Dan [Jordan] did a great job to win the tournament at heavyweight," Zeigler said. "It was an opponent that's beaten him twice and nationally ranked. So that was a big win for Dan, and puts him in a much better position going into the national tournament."

At 133 pounds, NWC's Berdiyoyrov was pinned in the first-

Ranked No. 2 in the state and coming off a second-place showing at the 3A West Regional, the Powell High School wrestling team has its sights set on its first 3A state championship since 2015 this weekend at the Casper Events Center.

Standing in their way will be three-time defending champion Star Valley — the team that ended the Panthers' four-year run of state titles in 2016. The Braves won the 3A West last week, and are sending 27 wrestlers to Casper this weekend; the Panthers will counter with 17 wrestlers of their own.

"I have high expectations for the kids we are sending down for what they'll do there at state," said PHS head coach Nate Urbach. "But you have to wrestle the matches, and you have to be ready to go."

Powell senior Reese Karst will be going for his third straight state championship and his second at 138 pounds; he won at 132 pounds his sophomore year.

"A third state title is big, so place match by Northeastern's Quintel Fuchs.

The Rocky Mountain District Tournament is set up where wrestlers compete for a "true second." If the wrestler who finishes third has not wrestled the second-place wrestler during the tournament, he can challenge for that second place spot; since wild card bids are at a premium, wrestlers who finished third might have to rely on a challenge match to punch their ticket to nationals.

Berdiyrov was challenged by Western's Joey Revelli and, in a rematch from the Apodaca Duals earlier this month, won a close 3-1 decision.

"Bobur [Berdiyrov] wrestled good," Zeigler said.

Schafer, who qualified for the national tournament last season, lost to Western's Jake Thompson in the 149-pound second-place match; it was the third time the two wrestlers have met this season. Schafer decided Thompson 18-11 at the Apodaca Duals; Thompson won the rematch the following week, pinning Schafer in the second round. Schafer rebounded with a win over Otero's Jake Ballesteros for third place. Because of his status as a returning national qualifier, Schafer was granted a wild card bid to continue his season.

"Palmer [Schafer] was the first one selected," Zeigler said.

After losing to Northeastern's Dillon Thomas in the 174-pound semifinals, NWC's Moran battled back to decision Otero's Diego Vigil-Reyes 6-2 to place third. He then challenged Western's Jace Anderson for second place, winning an 8-7 decision.

At 184 pounds, Fox lost in the semifinals to Northeastern's Hayden Wempen, but came back to pin Otero's Jaylon Chiles to finish third. Fox, a freshman from Kamas, Utah, was awarded the Apodaca Award earlier this season, and Zeigler said he's proud at what the young wrestler has accomplished.

"Qualifying for the national tournament is a big deal — it's a big deal for a kid to get there and get experience, whether he places or not," Zeigler said of Fox. "It's a great experience for that young man to go. You expect to make two trips to the national tournament during your tenure at Northwest College, and if you're fortunate enough to do that, you're likely to place one of those times."

The Trappers will spend the week leading up to nationals fine-tuning their game, with an eye toward making some noise on the NJCAA's biggest stage.

"We'll be working out hard in the mornings with conditioning, and the afternoons we'll be getting a lot more technical on the mat, a lot more skill work," Zeigler said. "We'll do a lot more individual work in the afternoon. We'll just be trying to prepare them individually for the championships. Each guy needs a little something different."

PHS WR: Karst, Karhu looking to defend state championship titles

we have to make sure Reese [Karst] is ready to go," Urbach said. "He has to make sure he takes it one step at a time."

Calling Karst one of his leaders, Urbach said the senior is a big reason for the team's success.

"The hallmark of excellence is consistency — can you be good over a period of time?" Urbach said. "Athletes will always have ups and downs, so to be a multiple-time state champion, you have to be consistent. And that's what Reese has been, ever since he walked in the room."

Junior Brody Karhu is the defending state champion at 152 pounds, and would like to take the next step to becoming a three-time champion.

"Brody has to do the same thing — take it one match at a time and not look ahead," Urbach said.

Fresh off of his 3A West title at 160 pounds, sophomore Seth Horton heads to state ranked No. 5, while teammate Carson Olsen hopes to turn his third-place finish at regionals into a state medal at 195 pounds.

"Seth Horton has had a really good year, and has done very well for a sophomore at a fairly high weight," Urbach said. "Carson Olsen has done excellent, considering he's basically a freshman in terms of wrestling experience."

At the lower weights, Tyler Feller at 120 pounds, Michael Maddox at 126 pounds and Corey Linebaugh at 132 pounds all placed third at last weekend's regional tournament — and Urbach is excited for their chances at state.

"Corey Linebaugh has really been wrestling well lately; he's really turned around his season," Urbach said. "I'm excited to see what he'll do. Same with Michael Maddox. He's a guy that's come back and really started wrestling well. Tyler Feller is another guy that's really gotten better over the course of the season."

Seniors Cole Davis and Cameron Schmidt are making their final appearances at state, with both poised to earn a spot on the podium after years of hard work.

"Cole [Davis] and Cameron [Schmidt] are guys that have been in the room for four years," Urbach said. "Both of Panther senior Duy Linh Hoang begins a take down against Lyman's Matt Wolfard at the 3A West Regional tournament in Powell last weekend. them have chances to be state medalists now in their senior year. They'll have to wrestle well, but the opportunity will be there for them. These guys took a little longer to get to where they're at, so it's always nice to see that hard work pay off."

Bo Dearcorn reached the championship match at regionals at 182 pounds, losing a hard-fought match to Star Valley's Trent Clark. The junior is hoping for another shot at No. 1-ranked Clark in Casper.

"That's a match we really want to see," Urbach said.

At the heavier weights, seniors Duy Linh Hoang and Sawyer Mauthe hope to have an impact at 220 pounds and 285 pounds, respectively.

"I'm looking for really good things out of Duy [Linh Hoang] this weekend," Urbach said. "Sawyer [Mauthe] is another first-year guy, another freshman-as-a-senior. Hopefully he'll have a little better weekend. I think he will, he's had good practices this week and is ready to go."

A lot of eyes will be on Emma Karhu at 106 pounds, who surprised many by becoming the first female wrestler to place at state last season, finishing fifth as a freshman. Urbach said if she stays focused, the younger Karhu should be able to turn some heads again this weekend.

"She [Karhu] wasn't slated to place last year, and ended up having a really good tournament," Urbach said. "Hopefully she's hungry to prove that she wasn't a one-hit wonder. She's a good wrestler; she's tough. And she has state experience now, so all those things are on her side." Also heading to Casper this weekend will be Colt Nicholson at 106 pounds, Logan Werner at 113 pounds, Evan Habeck at 126 pounds and Riley Bennett at 132 pounds.

As for his expectations heading into the weekend, "I'm optimistic, but we have to wrestle," Urbach said. "That's one of those things where you just can't say, 'Well, we're going to be awesome.' If I had a magic wand that would guarantee peak performance, that would make my life much less stressful. The expectations are always high, we always want to make the state tournament our best tournament of the year. That's the expectation."

NWC WBB: Will honor sophomores Saturday at final home game

It was fun — it was back-and-forth."

NWC freshman Juliana Ribeiro had a breakout game for the Lady Trappers, netting 17 points and grabbing seven rebounds to lead the team in both categories.

"It's been a long time coming," Levett said of Ribeiro's performance. "She played really well, and we've been waiting for a game like that out of her, very efficient." Ribeiro said it was a good feeling just to get another victory.

"I felt great to win again," she said. "We played very well, we focused on our goals, we also knew how important this game was. I think when we play together we become stronger. We have to keep this spirit in every game."

Selena Cudney followed with 15 points, while Melissa Martinez scored 13 points, to go along with six boards and two assists. Taylor Groll started in place of an ill Kaylee Brown and chipped in six points.

"Taylor Groll has been playing a lot of good minutes for us, and I think she earned a start for us," Levett said.

Mikkel McIntosh and Tess Henry added five points apiece. NWC shot a respectable 49 percent from the floor (26-53), while committing just 11 turnovers. They hit on 12 of 22 shots from the charity stripe to finish at 54.5 percent.

Though she didn't make the trip, Brown said the win was a special one, considering the obstacles the team has had to overcome this season.

"I watched every minute and was so proud of how everyone played, and kept their heads when the going got a little tough," she said. "I started crying once we won because I was so happy and wished I could've been there to support. Now it's time to take this win and run with it."

close for much of the first quarter, but Casper began pulling away at the end of the period to lead 19-8.

NWC sophomore Shelby Wardell, back from an ankle injury that sidelined her for a month, hit a 3-pointer to start the second quarter, cutting the lead to single digits at 19-11. But that was as close as Northwest would get, with the T-Birds going into the half up 38-18.

Things weren't much better in the second half, with Northwest unable to get shots to fall consistently. The Lady Trappers ended the game shooting a dismal 25.9 percent (14 of 54) from the floor.

Wardell was a bright spot for NWC, sinking three of the team's four 3-pointers and finishing with a team-high 11 points.

"Shelby [Wardell] got her shot going a little bit, which was good to see," Levett said. "That was really her first game back, and it was good to have her. Tess Henry was back from injury as well, so we had some kids step up that hadn't played for a while, so that was good to see."

Martinez and Berkley Larsen netted nine points apiece, while Cudney chipped in five, and led the team in boards with seven. Sayer finished with six boards, to go along with three points.

'It was just a great win — everybody played a part.'

Camden Levett
Head coach

"Our defense was playing well, and our offense was shooting better than we have in the past," Levett said. "Everything was clicking. I told the girls at half that we've been here before with the lead, so we have to stay composed. We knew they were going to make a run, we just have to weather the storm."

The Rustlers slowly chipped away as the second half wore on, cutting the lead to one point by the end of the third quarter. Central came out firing to start the fourth, hitting their first three shots to take a six-point lead.

"We called timeout at that point, got everyone re-focused," Levett said. "We got stops and made our buckets.

Ascending God's holy hill

Psalm 24 is one of those psalms that is so rich and full with information that a short article like this one barely scratches the surface. The first two verses begin by declaring that God created this world and everything in it and on it. He entrusted all of his treasures to us and asks us to be faithful stewards of his in order that we might advance his cause on earth and glorify his name.

JOHN DELINGER
Perspectives

Verses three and four are the focus of this article. In verse three, the psalmist asks two questions: "Who may ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who may stand in his holy place?" Then in verse four, the psalmist answers the two questions he just asked with a four-fold response: "He who has clean hands and a pure heart; who has not lifted up his soul to an idol, nor sworn deceitfully." (NKJV)

"He who has clean hands" will ascend

God's holy hill, declares the psalmist. How clean are your hands? In a physical sense, at any given time our hands have millions of disease-causing bacteria on them. Right now every one of us has more bacteria on our bodies than there are people in the world. Our hands are the hardest part of the body to keep clean because we must use them for everything we do in life. That's why parents continually ask their children, "Have you washed your hands?"

In a spiritual sense, "clean hands" means abstaining from doing wrong. Paul says in 1 Timothy 2:8 that he "desires that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting."

Peter is just as forthright, admonishing us to "be diligent to be found by him in peace, without spot and blameless." (2 Peter 3:14)

What about having "a pure heart?" Clean hands and a pure heart go hand in hand. If you have one, you have the other. We need to always ask Jesus to give us a repentant heart as it originates with him (see Acts 5:31), as does forgiveness of sins (see also 1 John 1:9). Ask Jesus to point out those sins, those sinful acts that we are unaware of. Then confess them and be made righteous in Jesus (2 Corinthians 5:21).

Like the first two responses of "clean hands and a pure heart," the next two go hand in hand also because both have to do with God's reputation. Many texts of scripture tell us that God is a jealous God — in the sense that he will not, cannot share his glory with any false god. He alone demands our exclusive worship and devotion. He is the only true God and the only God of truth. We need to be totally devoted to him, and call on him to speak the truth. If we don't, we are deceiving ourselves about our real spiritual condition. We simply shrug him off when the holy spirit points out our sin to us.

If we adhere to these four things mentioned in Psalm 24:4, the Lord Jesus will bless us and make us righteous because of what he has done for us, and is doing for us day by day.

NWC MBB: Will close out regular season Saturday at home against Western Wyoming

impact players.”
The coach thought the Trappers’ forward “played very well,” but the Rustlers’ guards “just played better than we did, and we couldn’t match them.”

Central shot a gaudy 62 percent from the floor en route to a 51-39 halftime lead, compared to 51 percent from the Trappers. Northwest kept it closer in the second half but couldn’t make up the difference.

“We just couldn’t generate anything offensively,” Abdur-Rahkman said. “We played good defense — I think we held their best player to seven points. We just didn’t have any offense.”

Lagio Grantsaan had the hot hand for the Trappers, scoring 26 points and grabbing six boards in a losing effort. Darius Webster and Brian Howell netted 17 points apiece, while Calvin Fugett finished with eight.

The Trappers finished at 50.9 percent (28-for-55) from the floor, compared to 60 percent (35-of-58) by Central. The Rustlers won the battle of the boards 36-26.

“I think we were going pretty good, then it kind of just fell apart on us,” Abdur-Rahkman said. “Now we just have to try and put it back together.”

CASPER 112, TRAPPERS 72

The Trappers found out quick why the T-Birds are one of the top teams in the nation Saturday, scoring early and often en route to a 112-72 win.

“They don’t put that No. 10 ranking in front of your name for nothing,” Abdur-Rahkman said, adding, “That’s just a good team, man.”

Northwest kept it close until midway through the first half, when Casper went on a 20-4 run to blow the game open. The T-birds held a 21-point lead at the half, 52-31.

Casper continued to add to its lead in the second half, shooting 61 percent from the floor and going a perfect 11-for-11 at the charity stripe.

“That game exposed a lot of our weaknesses, and one constant with high-level teams is energy and effort,” Abdur-Rahkman said. “I tell young guys I coach all the time that the difference between teams that excel and those that don’t is how hard guys play. How hard you play, how much effort you put in, that separates people. Casper was a separator, and we could never catch up.”

The Trappers were still missing Brown and Okongo from the lineup, and freshman Brian Howell was also unavailable. Abdur-Rahkman used the opportunity to get some of his bench players significant court time, and was pleased with the results.

“At full strength, we certainly could have given them a better game,” Abdur-Rahkman said. “But you have to rely on what’s available to you, and it’s tough when your options are limited. But I felt good about getting guys in there who don’t play a lot and get them some meaningful minutes.”

The game was not without its bright spots, with five Trappers finishing in double figures. Grantsaan again led the charge, finishing with 20 points and grabbing eight rebounds. Fugett followed with 14 points, while Webster chipped in 11.

Torbert and Jason Feliz netted 10 points apiece, with Torbert finishing with a team-high four assists.

NWC shot just 32 percent from the floor (22-of-68), while Sheridan countered with a 41-of-67 performance (61 percent).

Despite the lopsided loss, Abdur-Rahkman said he was also encouraged by how the team conducted themselves, before, during and after the game.

“It’s not always about scoring, it’s not always about winning, it’s about how you conduct yourself,” he said. “We didn’t surrender, and we didn’t quit. I thought that was important.”

UW HOOPS

UW's comeback falls short in loss to UNLV

POKES SHOOT 50 PERCENT FROM FIELD IN SECOND HALF

Despite another 20-point performance from senior guard Justin James, the Cowboys’ offense could not find a consistent rhythm in a 66-56 loss to UNLV on Tuesday evening in the Arena-Auditorium.

James scored 25 points for the 44th 20-point scoring performance of his University of Wyoming career.

UW (6-20 overall, 2-11 Mountain West) nearly erased a 10-point deficit with under seven minutes remaining, coming within two points with 3:34 left. But the Runnin’ Rebels (15-11, 9-5 MW) closed the game on an 11-1 run to take their fourth win in the last five games.

James was 7-of-14 on the night from the field and was an impressive 9-of-12 from the free throw line. James had his hand in 81 percent of Wyoming’s scoring on the evening. He added six rebounds and five assists, as well.

Junior guard A.J. Banks added nine points for his highest scoring margin since adding 10 points at New Mexico on Jan. 19. He also tied a career-high with four assists.

Foreclosure

FORECLOSURE NOTICE:
D.B.Y., LLC

WHEREAS, on November 29, 2004, D.B.Y., LLC, as mortgagor, executed and delivered to Thomas J. Perkins, as mortgagee, a mortgage on certain real property described in the mortgage as security for payment of a promissory note in the principal amount of $50,000.00, which was executed and delivered by the mortgagor on the same day. The mortgage was duly recorded at the office of the County Clerk in and for Park County, Wyoming on December 3, 2004, as Document No. 2004-9155; and

WHEREAS, there has been a material breach of the promissory note, which the mortgage was given to secure, and the mortgagor is thus in default, in that payment was not made as required by the terms of the promissory note; and

WHEREAS, the mortgage contains a right of foreclosure provision which, by reason of the above-stated default, mortgagee, as the owner and holder of the mortgage, declares to have become operative; and

WHEREAS, as of January 29, 2019, the total amount due and owing to Mortgagee on the promissory note is $95,755.86, which represents the $50,000.00 principal amount, $42,534.27 in accrued but unpaid interest (accruing at $8.22 per diem), and $3,221.59 in late penalties. The amount due may also increase by the amount of any additional late charges, attorney’s fees and other charges, fees and/or costs that accrue pursuant to the terms of the promissory note and the mortgage; and

WHEREAS, the property being foreclosed upon may be subject to other liens and encumbrances that will not be extinguished at the sale. Any prospective purchaser should research the status of title before submitting a bid.

NOW, THEREFORE, Thomas J. Perkins, as mortgagee, will have the mortgage foreclosed as provided by law by causing the mortgaged property to be sold at public venue by the Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff in and for Park County, Wyoming, to the highest bidder for cash at 10:00 a.m. on the 13th day of March, 2019, at the front door of the Park County Courthouse located at 1002 Sheridan Avenue, Cody, Park County, Wyoming, for application on the above-described amounts secured by the mortgage, said mortgaged property with an address of 628 Lane 10, Powell, Wyoming 82414 and more particularly being described as follows, to-wit:

Township 55 North, Range 98 West, 6th P.M., Park County, Wyoming

Cost decrease

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Wyoming Public Service Commission (Commission) approved the Application of Montana-Dakota Utilities Co. (MDU or the Company) to pass on a wholesale natural gas cost decrease for the month of January through its Commodity Balancing Account (CBA). The pass on Application results in a wholesale gas cost decrease of $0.132 per dekatherm (Dth) to its Firm Residential, Firm General Service, Small Interruptible and Large Interruptible customers, and a decrease of $0.131 per Dth to its Optional Seasonal customers, through its CBA, effective on and after January 1, 2019. The proposed pass-on changes are attributable to an increase in pipeline charges and a decrease in the overall commodity price. The Commission’s approval is subject to notice, protest, intervention, refund, change, further investigation, opportunity for hearing and further order of the Commission.

The average MDU residential customer using 15.3 Dth in January 2019 will see a bill decrease of approximately $2.01 per Dth or 2.4%, before taxes. Actual bills will vary with usage.

The proposed pass-on results in a projected dollar-for-dollar decrease of approximately $55,968 in the Company’s January 2019 revenues. The decrease does not change the Company’s authorized rate of return.

Commission Rule Chapter 3, Section 26 allows a utility to pass on to its customers known or projected commodity cost increases or decreases on a dollar-for-dollar basis, subject to public notice, opportunity for hearing and refund.

MDU’s Applications are on file at the Commission’s offices, located at 2515 Warren Avenue, Suite 300, Cheyenne, Wyoming. The Application is available for inspection by any interested person during regular business hours or online at: <http://psc.state.wy.us/>.

Anyone desiring to file a statement, intervention petition, protest or request a public hearing in this matter must file in writing with the Commission on or before March 4, 2019. A proposed intervention or request for hearing must set forth the grounds under which they are made and the position and interest of the petitioner in this proceeding. Please mention Docket No. 30013-345-GP-18 (Record No. 15166) in your communications.

If you wish to intervene in this matter or request a public hearing that you will attend, or want to make a statement, a protest or a public comment, and you require reasonable accommodation for a disability, please contact the Commission at (307) 777-7427, or write to the Commission at 2515 Warren Avenue, Suite 300, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82002, to make arrangements. Communications-impaired persons may also contact the Commission by accessing Wyoming Relay at 711.

‘A Short Film’ installation opens Monday at NWC

Artist Ronna Nemitz will return to Northwest College with her most recent installation “A Short Film,” which will be featured in the Northwest Gallery. The opening reception gets underway Monday, from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Cabre Building.

The immersive multimedia installation will transform the gallery into a makeshift theater. The installation reimagines the artist’s experience of losing her parents through layered imagery of clothes, found video footage and sculptural elements.

Nemitz, a Wyoming native, is an alumna of Northwest College (1990-92) and the University of Wyoming, where she earned her bachelor of fine arts in painting and drawing in 1995. She received her master of fine arts from Arizona State University in 2011. Nemitz currently teaches art at Mesa Community College in Phoenix.

She returns to Wyoming and Northwest College to revisit the place of her youth. “In my work, I’m trying to disarm the intensity of the emotional predicament that I find myself in,” Nemitz said. “My father passed away this last year, and I am now my mother’s full-time caregiver. Wyoming was our shared home, our shared life. Wyoming is my first love and the place that I will always return to.”

Monday’s opening reception is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be available.

The Northwest Gallery is open from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. weekdays and from 7-8:30 p.m. on Thursdays. Admission is free.

QUILT GUILD MEETS MONDAY IN CODY

Paintbrush Piecers Quilt Guild will meet Monday at the Cody Senior Center. There will be a short business meeting at 6 p.m., followed by show and tell of work made by members and guests.

The program for Monday’s meeting will be presented by Sarah Trotter, physical therapist assistant at Powell Valley Healthcare Outpatient Physical and Occupational Therapy.

Trotter will demonstrate how to correctly use your body while cutting and quilting fabric. She will offer exercises for quilters to strengthen their hands, shoulders and backs.

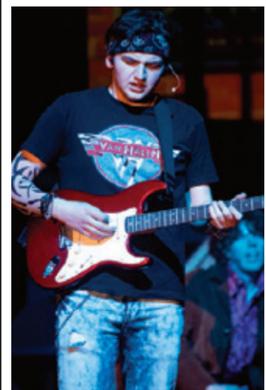

Trotter “is an accomplished quilter so she knows firsthand what contortions can cause damage to our bodies as we quilt,” said Marybeth Richardson with the guild.

Guests are always welcomed at the guild’s meetings. For more information, contact Richardson at 754-5399.
