Park County highways among the worst for wildlife collisions

INITIATIVE EYES PROJECTS TO HELP WITH PROBLEM

BY MARK DAVIS
Tribune Staff Writer

Two Park County highways are ranked among the most dangerous stretches for wildlife collisions in the state. Area drivers' odds of an automobile accident involving wildlife are highest between Trout Creek and Wapiti on U.S. Highway 14/16/20. It ranks as one of the top three most dangerous roads in the state per car traveling. And a 17-mile stretch of U.S. Highway 14 between Powell and Cody is classified as one of Wyoming's most dangerous sections of highway by volume. The Cody-Powell stretch sees about 140 animals hit per year (mostly deer), making it one of the three worst stretches of road in the state in terms of total number of animals killed per mile per year. "It's a pretty bad area compared with the rest of the state," said Corinna

Riginos, a conservation scientist with The Nature Conservancy. "It's one of the hotter areas." The figures are based off reported collisions to the Wyoming Department of Transportation; the tally goes up when you consider non-reported mortality, said Riginos, who estimated that about half go unreported. "There are many other animals, particularly deer, that get hit and die by the side of the road. But there's insufficient damage to the vehicle to actually report [the collision]," she said. Another area of great concern is

Wyo. Highway 120 between Cody and Meeteetse, said Corey Class, Cody Region wildlife management coordinator. It's a particular problem for pronghorn and mule deer. Spearheaded by the Wyoming Game and Fish Department and the Wyoming Department of Transportation, the two agencies jointly hosted a summit in 2017 to focus attention on migrating and wintering wildlife, wildlife-vehicle collisions, and motorist safety. The Wyoming Bureau of Land Management also joined in the discussion, plus The Nature Conservancy and several other non-governmental organizations. Together they formed the Wyoming Wildlife and Roadways Initiative to "find innovative ways to implement and fund projects that reduce wildlife-vehicle collisions, increase motorist safety and maintain or re-establish disconnected wildlife migration routes." Every year, more than 6,000 deer, pronghorn, elk and moose are reportedly hit by vehicles on Wyoming's roads. The accidents cost nearly $50 million annually in damages to vehicles, human injury expenses and loss of wildlife, said Bebe Crouse, the Conservancy's associate director of communications. The risk of hitting an animal, per vehicle traveling, is highest on some of the less-trafficked roads. The highest risk is a spot near the Laramie Mountains, followed by the Trout

MAN SENTENCED TO PROBATION FOR DISRUPTION AT HOSPITAL

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

A man who caused a drunken disturbance at Powell Valley Hospital in late December has been ordered to serve one year of unsupervised probation. Thomas E. Larson, 28, reportedly chased a nurse with an IV stand and shut himself in an elderly patient's room before being subdued by a Powell police officer. He's also suspected to have gotten into a confrontation with a nearby resident hours before the incident at the hospital.

The Park County Attorney's Office initially charged Larson with a felony count of aggravated assault, but reduced it to a misdemeanor charge of reckless endangering as part of a plea deal. Under the agreement, Larson pleaded guilty to the endangering as well as misdemeanor counts of property destruction and breach of peace.

THOMAS LARSON

District Court Judge Bill Simpson accepted the arrangement, crediting Larson for the day-and-a-half he served in jail after his arrest and suspending another 364 days of jail time in favor of probation. Thomas also must pay $600 in court fees and assessments and $446.50 in restitution for damage caused at the hospital. The sentence was imposed at a May hearing and finalized in a Monday order. Defense attorney Sarah Miles said Thomas plans to pay the full amount he owes by the end of the week. Miles said he's taken responsibility for his actions and is trying to make amends.

"He [Thomas] was just appalled at his own behavior," Miles said, describing him as "one of the most remorseful clients I've ever had." After his arrest, Thomas "sought out some things because this type of behavior is just so wildly out of character for him," Miles said. She described the mechanical engineer as timid, mild-mannered and quiet. "Never in a million years could you picture him behaving this way," Miles said. Charging documents say the incident began around 3 a.m. on Dec. 30, when a Powell Valley Hospital nurse heard a banging sound coming from the hallway. The male nurse spotted Larson, who yelled, "Hey, a—hole, come on," and then barricaded himself in an equipment room. Larson later came out wielding a metal IV stand and chased the frightened nurse down a hallway before shutting himself in an elderly woman's room, charging documents say.

COUNCIL HEARS COMPLAINTS ABOUT SIGN RESTRICTIONS

BY KEVIN KILLOUGH
Tribune News Editor

The City of Powell's sign ordinances are overly restrictive, a local food truck operator told the city council on Monday. Barry Wilske, owner of Topp Dawg Concessions, was recently informed by city officials that he couldn't fly flag signs in front of his food truck — which he intermittently parks on Coulter Avenue, next to the American Legion, for a few hours around lunchtime. Wilske said he's been in business for several years and flies the flags in other towns where he operates, without any conflicts with local ordinances. Powell's ordinances limit temporary signs advertising businesses to 2-foot wide, 4-foot high sandwich boards. There are other restrictions as to when and where on a sidewalk these can be placed. "From what I understand, it flat-out says they don't want you to advertise your business," Wilske said. Council members said businesses can advertise, but the flags are outside what is permitted. Wilske requested to be allowed to fly his flag signs, which he said were used only for brief intervals and do not interfere with pedestrian traffic. "It's only for three hours a day," he said. City Administrator Zack Thorington said concerns about the sign restrictions have come before the Planning and Zoning Board, which ultimately recommended to keep the ordinances as they're written. Wilske pointed out that signs for Saturday's free fishing event at Homesteader Park were larger than his, but Mayor John Wetzel said that, since they were advertising a community event and not a business, they were within the city's sign ordinance. Councilor Jim Hillberry said part of the reasoning for the sign restrictions was concerns over distractions that

A BIT TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT

A throng of Yellowstone National Park visitors — awaiting the next eruption of Old Faithful — wound up having a close encounter with a bison last week. "There was a ranger there preventing anyone else from going too close," said Powell photographer Ilene Olson, who captured the moment. "She said that would put pressure on the bison and put those people in further danger. This encounter concluded without any injuries."

City administrator Logan says goodbye

Before adjourning their Monday meeting, Powell City Council members gave an official goodbye to former City Administrator Zane Logan. Logan's retirement became official this month, and Zack Thorington took over the duties of the position. It was Thorington's first meeting in the administrator seat. Mayor John Wetzel and Councilor Scott Mangold praised Logan for his work over his many years of service. Mangold pointed out Logan's efforts in a number of significant town projects, such as the Powell Aquatic Center. "You'll see your imprint on a lot of things you should be proud of," Mangold said.

Logan thanked the citizens of Powell for letting him serve in the position and noted that he couldn't take all the credit for the projects he's been involved in developing. "I didn't do any of that by myself," he said. Logan will continue on part-time as a representative of the city's interest in the conference center attached to the planned Clocktower Hotel. He won't begin those duties until and unless project developer Steve Wahrlich finds the financing needed to break ground and enter the construction phase on the public-private partnership.

Collisions: Solutions aren't easy

Creek-Wapiti area.

"The Cody-Powell section risk per vehicle of hitting an animal is not as high, but is still in the top [third] of the more than 40 sites that the Wyoming Wildlife and Roadways Initiative evaluated," Riginos said.

The Game and Fish and WYDOT combined their data to identify hot spots, mapping out the state's areas of greatest concern. From the map, they prioritized areas of action based not only on a safety perspective, but also in terms of wildlife populations, Class said.

Most local residents are aware of routine crossing areas in Park County, but area attractions draw in many visitors. "The traffic is just now picking up with tourists in the area," he said.

And it's not just deer and pronghorn that have the agencies concerned. Two grizzly bears have already been killed on area roads this year, and moose in the Bighorn Mountains are also a concern.

Solutions aren't as easy as just putting up more fences. Concerns for migration routes and further fragmenting habitat have to be taken in consideration. The best solution is over- and underpasses, Riginos said.

"They are more than 80 percent effective in reducing collisions," she said, "But we recognize of course that they are expensive and not always feasible."

Each crossing structure can cost from "[a] million to millions" of dollars, Riginos said. "They are the long-term solution if they can be done."

There are more than a dozen underpasses and two overpasses already built in the state. Six more are under construction south of Jackson. But there aren't any in the Big Horn Basin.

One issue in the Powell area is its agricultural nature, said Scott Gamo, environmental services manager for WYDOT. There are many access points to fields filled with resident wildlife that make it nearly impossible to direct wildlife to safe crossing areas.

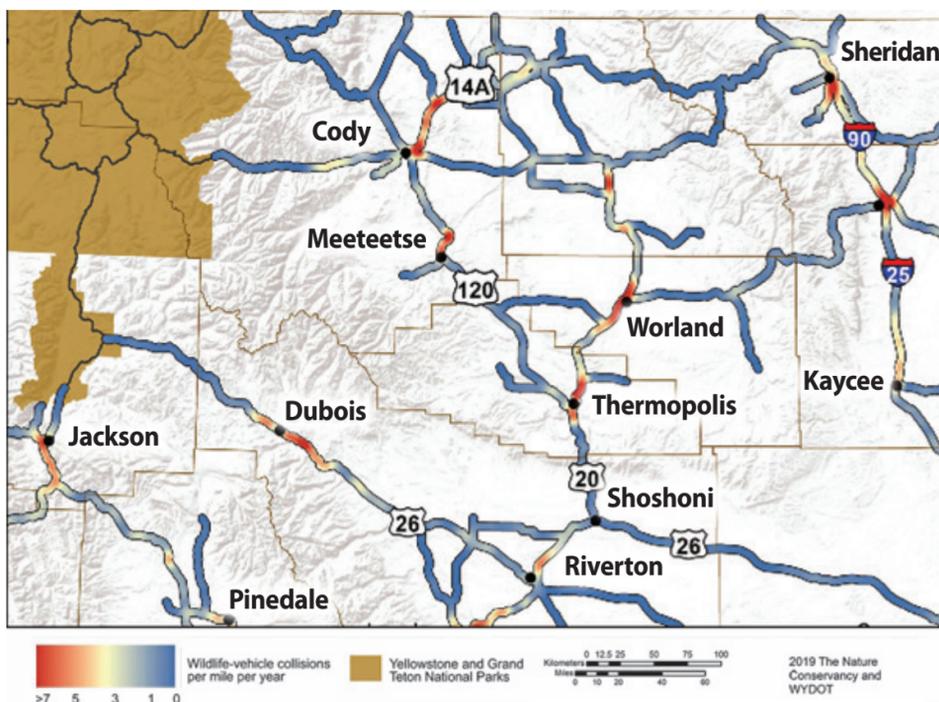

"Some areas are more difficult than others," Gamo said. "Wildlife corridors were initially prioritized because year-round and seasonal use areas between ag land and bedding sites are tougher to control."

For Park County's priority areas, he said signage and public awareness may be the best solution. One way WYDOT has approached the problem is portable message signs.

"We move them around so people are surprised by the sign, hoping [to] catch people's attention better," Gamo said.

More than 240 projects have been identified statewide by the groups, with 41 deemed high priority. New high-visibility signs were recently installed between Cody and Wapiti to catch the attention of visitors traveling to Yellowstone National Park, Gamo said. But finding a steady funding stream for projects may be the highest hurdle at this point.

Some of the funding sources include a specialty license plate (unveiled last year) that collects funds dedicated to wildlife crossings and targeted federal grants. The group has also been investigating other avenues, such as collecting a specialty fee at national park properties for wildlife crossings and approaching the Legislature to institute a special tax.

Sheriff expecting period of turnover

Thanks to a series of retirements and a military deployment, the Park County Sheriff's Office may look a bit different by the end of the summer.

Sheriff Scott Steward said he recently learned one of his Cody area patrol deputies will be deployed with the U.S. military from late July through May 2020. Plus, "we're going to have at least three other employees retire out of the Cody district in the next two or three months," Steward told Park County commissioners Tuesday.

To fill those spots, the sheriff said there are detention deputies who are interested in moving to patrol — though that will mean hiring new deputies to serve in the jail.

To cushion the short-term crunch, the sheriff plans to have the department's investigator work regular patrol shifts, and Steward said he plans to start the hiring and training processes sooner rather than later.

"Going to be pretty thin there for awhile," offered Park County Commission Chairman Jake Fulkerson.

"We'll get 'er done," responded Steward.

Including the sheriff and undersheriff, the department has 21 deputies in the patrol division, with another 26 deputy positions in the detention center, the sheriff's website says.

Powell police to help provide security at Cody concert

When tourists and other visitors head to some big events in Cody this summer, some Powell police officers may also be on hand to help make sure things remain orderly.

At its regular Monday meeting, the Powell City Council approved mutual aid agreements between the Cody and Powell police departments. The agreement will allow a few officers to help with security at an upcoming concert.

The Cody Police Department requested help from their counterparts in Powell for events in Cody around the end of June and beginning of July. That includes a free Clint Black concert that's set for June 27 at Cody's Stampede Park and, if needed, the Cody Stampede Parade around the 4th of July.

The Cody Police Department will be covering all expenses for whatever aid Powell officers provide — including salaries, fuel and any damage to equipment that occurs in the course of Powell police officers' duties.

Powell Police Chief Roy Eckerdt told the council the Cody Police Department has been "very generous" in the past with such reimbursements.

Signs: Council denies permission

could cause accidents.

However, Councilor Scott Mangold expressed support for the council at least giving consideration to reforming the city's sign ordinances; Mangold said he's seen Wilske's signs and didn't think they were overly distracting.

"I didn't crash," he said.

The mayor disagreed. Wetzel said he's never received complaints about the sign restrictions from brick-and-mortar businesses. The restrictions, he argued, have been revisited by the Planning and Zoning Board before, which upheld them. Other cities, Wetzel added, have more restrictive ordinances on signs and have good economies. Planning and Zoning "has done a good job," he said. "It's going to take a little more convincing before I'd change my mind."

Visibly irritated by the council's refusal to grant him permission to fly his flags, Wilske said the sign restrictions are making it difficult for businesses to advertise, which was at odds with economic development.

"Don't you want the economic benefits?" he asked.

Wetzel said that, while he understands businesses need to advertise, he wasn't willing to "uniformly override" the conclusions of the Planning and Zoning Board.

OBITUARIES

Larry Lee Larsen

(Dec. 28, 1940 - Feb. 14, 2019)

Photographer, painter, ceramic sculptor, boilermaker, bon vivant, and iconoclast, Larry Larsen passed away peacefully on Valentine's Day in Seattle, Washington. Born in Billings, Montana, to Oscar Larsen and Ethelyn Hines, the family moved to Powell in 1947. After high school graduation, Larry left for Minneapolis, Minnesota, and then San Francisco, California.

Larry married Sharon Backstrom in 1960 and had daughter, Dana. He graduated from San Francisco State in 1965 with a degree in fine art.

He married Leslie Boles and had two sons, Eric and Chris. For 30 years, Larry worked as a boilermaker welder, but he always made art in his free time. A true perfectionist, he worked steadily on restoration of his 1917 Wallingford Craftsman and garden. He had several notable early trips to Europe, India and Japan as an adjunct to his art and design interests and spiritual questing.

With his partner of 20 years, Ruth Quinet, Larry traveled around the world several times, going to most European countries, Russia, China, Southeast Asia, Africa, and to many of their favorite U.S. cities. He was a connoisseur of art and photography, jazz

(but with an uncanny memory for 1950s and 1960s pop lyrics), orchids and bamboo. Larry was also an excellent cook. Larry and Ruth hosted countless dinners for friends and family, with Larry preparing complicated main-course extravaganzas. Larry was involved in several neighborhood efforts over the years to calm traffic, ease parking and high-density issues, and was an involved Democrat.

LARRY LARSEN

Larry leaves behind his partner, Ruth Quinet; Ruth's son Derrick Quinet; daughter Dana Vermilion (Mark) of Kent, Washington; sons Eric (Tarina Yasmothr) Larsen of Fairfax, California, and Chris (Meg Cary) Larsen of Seattle, Washington; his grandchildren, Megan and Lauren Vermilion and Cyrus and Alma Larsen; his sisters, Jean Paul (Ernie) of Powell and Paulette Johnson (Terry) of Ogden, Utah; and many other family members and friends.

Good friends Dean Forbes and Kevin Purcell will miss their bi-weekly "chinwags" at the Elysium with him. Always a radical, Larry lived life on his own terms until the end. He was an introspective, thoughtful, and well-intentioned man, and we are very happy to have been a part of his life.

James Robert McKeever

(May 5, 1940 - May 31, 2019)

James (Jim) Robert McKeever, 79, of Billings, Montana, passed away at home on May 31, 2019, from a broken heart following the recent death of his wife, "Patsy," of 60 years. He was born the youngest of 13 in Forsyth, Montana, on May 5, 1940, to Eugene and Hazel McKeever.

He attended local schools and graduated from Forsyth High School in 1958. He was co-captain of the football team and senior class president. He was active, outgoing, and gregarious.

In 1959, he married the love of his life, Patricia. They moved to Powell where he worked as a police officer. In his spare time, he also worked for Sitton Concrete. In 1972, he moved his family to Billings and started his own business, McKeever Concrete Products. After over 20 years, he sold the business.

In 1994, he went to work for Rimrock Trailways, where he drove bus for over 20 years until he retired to care for his wife until her death last March. He was a caring husband and dad, but he really loved being grandpa, Jim. He enjoyed his grandkids' games, concerts, competitions, recitals, school programs, award ceremonies, birthday parties, buying their 4-H pig projects, driving the bus for their teams, dancing in the living room, early Christmas mornings and big family dinners. His biggest smiles were when his arms were around his family.

Jim was preceded in death by his treasured wife, Patricia; his parents Eugene and Hazel; his brothers Dan, Ray, Tom and Don McKeever; his sisters Helen Mouat and Peggy Hamlin; and infant daughter Kimberly.

JIM MCKEEVER

He is survived by his sons Steve (Susan) and Mike (Julie Edney); former daughter-in-law, Tanya McKeever; his sisters Jean Neyrinck, Pat (Bob) Miller, Kay Womack, Carol McKeever-Stevens, Vonnie Miller; his brother Jack (Em) McKeever; his grandkids Brian (Jesi) McKeever, Amy (Kris) Nelson, Sam (Suzanne) McKeever, Cody (Mandy) McKeever, Molly and Emily McKeever; as well as seven great-grandkids and many nieces, nephews, in-laws and friends.

Services will be held at 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 8, at City Church on the corner of Wicks and Lake Elmo in Billings.

Keith Edward Noland

(Jan. 11, 1932 - June 1, 2019)

Keith Edward Noland, 87-year-old longtime Worland resident, went to his heavenly home on June 1, 2019. He returned once more to the loving arms of his wife as he passed away in their home surrounded by family.

Keith was born on Jan. 11, 1932, in Montour, Idaho, to Maurice and Irma (Hendricks) Noland.

Growing up in the 1930s, like many others of that day, he learned the value of hard work at an early age. He put himself through high school and one semester of college by working for his uncle. After his first semester of college, a cousin's husband helped him get a job with Mountain Bell in Rigby, Idaho. He had found his life's work. He was part of the pioneer line crew who dug telephone pole holes by hand. He then helped place the mule team drawn telephone poles over Togwotee Pass, which brought the first telephone wires into Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

It was also during this time that he met the woman who would become the center of his world for the rest of their lives, Gladys Althoff. The couple married on Aug. 27, 1955, in Powell and to this union were born four children, Edward, Katherine, Sue and John. Each year the couple put in a large garden, where they taught their children the benefits of hard work. They were good parents who raised their children with love and an abundance of opportunities to work and serve their neighbors.

Keith took on a second job of caring for a retired couple's 40-acre ranch while the children were small. They learned firsthand how dedicated their father was to helping others in their time of need.

In 1974, they relocated to Worland, where Keith was promoted to a district manager and oversaw the microwave long-distance transmissions, as well as managing the office. His wife went back to work as a switchboard operator until the need for operators became obsolete.

Keith retired in 1990 after 39 years with Mountain Bell. He was an active member of Kiwanis. He was proud to have helped Fran Scranton in getting Wyoming Health Fairs to come to Worland. He enjoyed helping organize that event every year, once again involving his children as volunteers. Big Brothers Big Sisters was another important part of his life. He always loved to "give back."

He and Gladys took up golfing and bowling as their children left the nest. Keith received many awards in bowling. He bowled the Jackpot Doubles with John one year and received his highest series of 728, which won the tournament for them.

He and Gladys were inseparable. They did everything from square dancing, playing cards, camping at Sunlight or Crandall Creek with friends, working in their garden and yard, to having daily coffee at Maggie's. He enjoyed being able to take his lovely bride to lunch at Maggie's. Then they would take their beloved dog, Benny, on a car ride every afternoon.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his beloved wife of 63 years, Gladys, on Feb. 14, 2019; and brothers Roy and Vern.

Survivors include his sons Edward (Shannon) Noland of Bainbridge Island, Washington; John (Michelle) Noland of Worland; daughters, Katherine (Randy) Tullis of Torrington; Sue Lorenzen (Larry Costalez) of Worland; grandchildren: Michael Noland, David Noland, Amy (Andy) Houser, Stacey Tullis (Don Gothing), Nicole (Levi) French, Andrew Lorenzen (Kitty Zhong), Tonya (Eric) Enloe, Brandy Noland (Jorge Herrera), Dallas Noland (Adam Paulsen) Patrick, Brandyn, Taylor, Ashtyn and Aspyr Noland; great-grandchildren: Harper, Hayden, Kable, Kimber and Kyson; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins and her faithful fur baby, Benny.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 8, 2019, at First Baptist Church in Worland with Pastor Jess Rollema officiating. Burial will follow at the Riverview Memorial Gardens Cemetery. Visitation for family and friends will be held one hour prior to services at the church. Memorial donations may be made to the Worland Senior Center, c/o PO Box 524, Worland, WY 82401. Online condolences may be made at www.bryantfuneralhomeonline.com.

ROCKS FALL ON NORTH FORK

Some good-sized rocks came tumbling down along the North Fork Highway west of Cody last week. Fortunately, all of the rocks landed in the ditch along U.S. 14/16/20, with none reaching the roadway. The Wyoming Department of Transportation plans to clean up the material later this month. Department spokesman Cody Beers said WYDOT geologists planned to visit the site — about 14 miles east of Yellowstone — on Wednesday and assess everything uphill from the rocks. Photo courtesy WYDOT

City to begin spraying for mosquitoes

With summertime around the corner, the City of Powell Sanitation Department is getting ready to fight mosquitoes — before the bugs start swarming around town.

The City of Powell will begin spraying for mosquitoes this month.

City Sanitation Superintendent Darrell Rood is hopeful that this year's season will be similar to previous years, when mosquito activity was "quite a bit less than average."

Last year, there were four human cases of West Nile virus reported in Wyoming, according to the Wyoming Department of Health.

The city received a $7,800 grant through the Wyoming

Department of Agriculture to help reduce the risk of West Nile virus. The money allows the sanitation department to trap mosquitoes, perform counts and spray as mosquito numbers increase.

City of Powell crews will start spraying a chemical called Biomist when local residents begin seeing mosquitoes. Biomist is manufactured by Clarke Mosquito Control. More information about the spray is available at <http://international.clarkemosquito.com>.

Weather permitting, spraying begins at dusk and takes about four hours.

Throughout the season, crews spray as trap counts increase and as residents call in complaints. If you do not want your property to be sprayed, call the city at 754-5106 to be put on the no-spray list.

KPOW (AM 1260) will announce plans for evening spraying between 7-7:30 a.m. on days when spraying is scheduled. The city also will announce spraying days on its website at www.cityofpowell.com.

The grant money also will pay for larvicide for city storm drains; the drains often contain standing water, which is prime mosquito habitat.

For more information about the City of Powell's mosquito-control program, contact the Sanitation Department at 754-6941.

IN OUR OPINION

Recent DUIs a 'sobering' reminder to think before you drink and drive

A cold, wet spring has finally given way to what we in Park County hope will be a summer full of fond memories, good weather and quality time spent with family and friends.

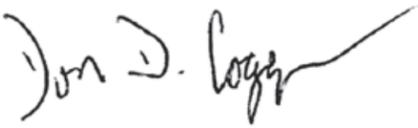

With all the fun to be had during long weekends and vacations packed with picnics, road trips and barbecues, increased travel on our roadways is a reality. Not only do people travel in greater numbers in the summer months, many enjoy a cocktail or two beforehand, leading to increased traffic violations and accidents. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, "a higher volume of holiday travelers, including a significantly higher number of alcohol-impaired drivers, cause nearly twice the number of automotive deaths during summer months than during the rest of the year combined."

A disturbing trend indeed, and one that hits even closer to home with the news that five Park County residents were arrested over the weekend and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol or a controlled substance; one of the men arrested had a child in the vehicle with him. Ironically, a new summer campaign designed to bring further awareness to the dangers of drunk driving was approved Monday by the Governor's Council on Impaired Driving.

Wyoming offers a plethora of outdoor (and indoor) activities in the summer months, many of which can be found right here in the Big Horn Basin. Law enforcement officials will be out in force during this time, with a focus on preventing alcohol-related accidents. According to a 2017 study based on data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and Mothers Against Drunk Driving, Wyoming ranked first among all 50 states in DUI arrests and fatalities; in 2018 there was a total of 687 alcohol-related crashes. Thirty-two of those crashes involved a fatality. And according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, accidents that occur over the 4th of July weekend claim the lives of almost 120 people on average nationally, making the holiday one of the most dangerous of the year.

Having a sober plan for getting home, though it's mentioned so often it borders on cliché, still bears repeating. Having a designated driver, or having someone you can call in the event of drinking too much, remains the easiest way to ensure a safe ride home for you and your companions. Since Powell is without a taxi or ride service, a friend or a relative will most likely agree to venture out for a good cause.

We would like everyone to have a safe, happy summer, filled with good times and great memories. But be responsible, especially when getting behind the wheel. Don't be a statistic this year. Have fun, and enjoy time with your family and friends. But do it safely.

Heart Mountain Camp — To the End

(The story of the Heart Mountain Relocation Center's second and largely unknown life, as seen through my now 9-year-old eyes, concludes.)

Perhaps it was the shared experience of living through the blizzard of '49 together that turned the camp from ... well a camp, as in a temporary way-station ... into a community. As kids, we watched with a distinct lack of interest as the adults worked to turn their units into homes and develop a sense of community spirit with sports and activities. The men played baseball. As I recall, the teams came from the different sections of the camp.

Each of these had a name. We lived on Goat Hill — the area including the monument, the admin building and at least eight other barracks. Probably more. Across the road and to the east of the little white house that still survives and around the hospital and laundry buildings was Snob Knob. Its name derived from the fact that the senior Relocation Authority officers had lived there. Another cluster of barracks on the north side of the current road (after it bends) formed at least one other neighborhood.

Beautification became a big deal. The women planted flowers and watered them from the kitchen sink. Mom had found a sapling which she'd stuck in the ground that first summer. Now, she added hollyhocks and iris bulbs, the latter sent by her father, who bred iris as a hobby.

"They should grow almost anywhere," she said, probably made mildly optimistic by the very green spring of 1949. The front of our barracks now sprouted little fences to keep kids and dogs off.

But it was the community gardens "below the hill" that occupied almost everyone. Situated in a field just to the east of Road 19, someone (probably during the Japanese period of occupation) had divided the land into plots, with the interested residents drawing for location. We now learned about irrigation and head-gates and how to make little dams out of pieces of canvas and scraps of lumber.

This was fun. We'd ditched our shoes with the first nice weather and wallowed in the feel of mud between our toes. But by July, the gardens had become pretty much an adults-only affair. Weeding was distinctly not a kid thing.

The Fourth of July saw us learning about cowboys and rodeos. At last we would get to see real live cowboys and maybe, even, some Indians. Mom worked her sewing machine overtime, cutting parachute silk from the Army Surplus store — iridescent orange — into Western shirts. It seemed like everyone in the camp went to the rodeo and the parades, driving in convoys and picnicking in Cody's City Park, where we made jokes about coming east (from Oregon) to get to the West.

The Bureau of Reclamation annual picnic was another occasion for a general exodus, this time to Horse Creek Campground on the North Fork. The men did the cooking and organized games for both adults and kids, while the moms set out plates, utensils and food on long tables. Watermelon-eating contests — who could eat a slice of watermelon the fastest — was a real favorite, with the river being handy for cleaning up the resulting mess.

All the time, during these years, people were dribbling out of the camp and into either Cody or Powell, while the camp, itself, gradually disappeared. By the end of the summer of 1949, we'd lost the high school and the common buildings central to the area once occupied by the Japanese, while the camp's boundaries seemed to be shrinking. Where once we would put our peanut butter and jelly sandwiches in a sack and hike out to the northern perimeter on our way to climb the bench, tiring before we reached the last building, now we'd find ourselves passing the last of the barracks almost immediately ... or so it seems from this far future time.

The summer of 1950 proved even slimmer, the camp now reducing further, and I believe to the degree that the community garden project ended.

People vanished along with buildings. Our friends who lived on the north side of the camp went first. They were followed by those of us in Goat Hill and Snob Knob. Some would be disappearing pretty much forever from my life as they moved into Powell. Others simply transitioned. Two of my best friends were among the former, being lost to me by the Cody-Powell divide that was, if anything, more complete than now.

Most, however, moved into Cody, but the closeness we enjoyed in the camp dissipated in the larger environment. A few things did stay the same. Our Girl Scout leader, for example, would go on to become our Scout leader when we moved to Cody. The annual Bureau picnics became reunions where old bonds would be restored for a few hours.

Finally, one day daddy detoured on a trip to Powell to show us where we had lived. He parked on the road by what was left — the concrete slab that had been a tennis court and mom's skinny tree that marked the boundary between our unit and the middle unit. Beyond, the memorial to the Japanese soldiers who'd fought in WWII had deteriorated further due to the weather, while the rock wall forming the base had mostly collapsed.

The area had yet to be farmed, so the ground still showed where roads had run and buildings once stood. But, soon, even those would be gone as would people's recollections of what had happened here. Only the high chimney of the old laundry, a few buildings, and the monument remained as reminders. Finally, in the 1990's a group of local citizens had the vision and the determination to fund and create a museum designed to educate future generations and, hopefully, ensure that a similar misjustice does not occur again.

As for our post-war years at the camp? It's a tiny footnote, but a positive one. At least the U.S. government's financial investment in the camp paid off in an unexpected way: providing necessary housing for both the staff, who worked to complete the Shoshone Project, and the homesteaders, who turned the desert into farmland.

Proposal for greenhouse business outside Cody voted down by county commissioners

BY CJ BAKER
Tribune Editor

Although most neighbors supported the idea, a woman's plans to start a landscape and greenhouse business east of Cody have been blocked by her subdivision's covenants, Park County's zoning regulations and commissioners. Kendra Morris, the owner of Pollen Landscapes, hoped to build multiple greenhouses and a pole barn on a vacant 3.72-acre parcel that lies just south of U.S. Highway 14/16/20. The problem is the proposal would add more square feet of commercial space than is allowed in the residential area.

Morris asked county commissioners to grant her an exception to the zoning rules — known as a variance — but they rejected the request on a 3-2 vote last month.

"I believe there's other commercial properties in the Cody area where this [project] could happen," Commissioner Lloyd Thiel said of Morris' plans. He joined with commissioners Jake Fulkerson and Dossie Overfield in voting to deny Morris' request on May 21.

"I'm really torn on this one, because I truly support economic development, small business, all that," said Thiel. "But it is within a very strict residential subdivision with [covenants]."

The 3.72 acre parcel of land lies within the Country Club

Ranchettes Subdivision, where the covenants prohibit commercial businesses.

Two leaders of the homeowners' association, Bob Darling and Richard Lasko, told commissioners there was widespread support for Morris' plans — and that the landowners are thinking about relaxing the subdivision's rules.

"What they [Morris and her husband Dusty] have in mind ... it actually doesn't disturb anybody in that neighborhood as far as traffic concerns," said Darling, noting the greenhouse would be accessed directly from the highway. "And I feel that what they have in mind for that piece of property is a definite improvement of the property and an asset to the neighborhood."

The neighbor to the east of the proposed lot is also supportive, Morris said, while the lots to the west and south are vacant. She lives in the subdivision, too, on a different lot, and said she would build privacy fences and take other steps to prevent impacts to neighbors.

"I think their word is gold on that," Lasko said, citing his experiences with the Morrises.

Still, the support wasn't unanimous: one subdivision resident,

Ron Reel, wrote a letter asking commissioners to deny Pollen Landscapes' request. He said the change in the use of the land would "only be a detriment" to the covenants.

The conflict between the proposal and the subdivision's covenants bothered Thiel. While the county does not enforce covenants — which are private agreements between landowners — "I don't think we should step on them," he said. Thiel said he'd support the proposal "100 percent" if the subdivision residents amended the covenants.

But Commissioner Joe Tilden disagreed with that reasoning.

"If you vote against this approval of the variance, you're in essence voting to enforce covenants," Tilden cautioned the board; he and Commissioner Lee Livingston voted to grant Morris a variance.

However, in casting the tie-breaking vote against the proposal, Commission Chairman Fulkerson said his opinion had "nothing" to do with the covenants.

Fulkerson said the request simply didn't meet the criteria for variance — specifically saying there were no special circumstances or conditions that necessitated an exception to the rules.

Major commercial businesses — that is, those with more than 5,000 square feet of buildings or more than an acre of development — are not allowed under the area's rural residential 2-acre zoning.

Morris said she didn't really like the "major" label. She noted a nearby portable toilet sanitation service (Iverson Sanitation) and auto and RV repair business (M&P Repair) are classified as a minor commercial business.

"I feel like I would be smaller than the business across the street," Morris said.

However, in looking over the size and scope of Pollen Landscapes' plans, Fulkerson responded that "those are some pretty significant structures."

Morris proposed building a 30 by 96 foot greenhouse (2,880 square feet) and a 1,600 square foot pole barn in Pollen Landscapes' first year, then adding three 20 by 70 foot greenhouses (totaling 4,200 square feet) the following year.

While not wanting to call the Country Club Ranchettes location her "last resort," Morris said it was the "ideal choice." Morris said other sites she's looked at were not cost-effective.

Before voting to deny the variance, Thiel told Morris he was sorry, saying he wanted her to succeed, but felt the commission shouldn't "[step] on the toes of the covenants."

Repairs nearly complete on Chief Joseph bridge

Repairs are nearly complete on the Pat O'Hara Creek bridge on the Chief Joseph Scenic Highway after heavy rain in late May caused extreme erosion. It and the highway remain open for residents and travelers.

The large rain event on May 26 washed the rock riprap away from the bridge piers of the Pat O'Hara Creek bridge. The erosion forced the Wyoming Department of Transportation to load-limit the bridge at 13 tons until repairs could be completed. The weight limit was removed from the repaired bridge at 4 p.m. Wednesday, WYDOT said in a news release.

The Pat O'Hara Creek bridge is located north of Cody, just hundreds of feet off Wyo. Highway 120, at the beginning of Chief Joseph Scenic Highway.

WYDOT officials developed a plan to repair the bridge late last week, and after consultation with bridge engineers, workers launched repairs Monday underneath the bridge at the southeast end of Chief Joseph highway.

"Our guys are making excellent progress on these repairs," said WYDOT district maintenance engineer Lyle Lamb of Basin.

He said they've replaced the lost riprap and are reinforcing the H-pile bridge piers by welding large angle iron to the piers.

Repairs will continue through Friday and when complete should keep the highway open to bigger trucks and tour buses until a more-permanent repair project happens in the future, he said.

"We're estimating a more-permanent fix of the bridge may cost $300,000 or more," Lamb said.

The Pat O'Hara Creek bridge was built in the 1960s.

WYDOT geologists were working in the Cody area this week, assessing bridges, rockfall sites and other areas near Cody impacted by last week's rains, mud slides and rock slides.

PAVEMENT IMPROVEMENT PROJECT RESUMES THIS WEEK

A $2.95 million pavement improvement project is scheduled to resume this month north of Cody on Wyo. Highway 120.

The project begins at the end of the concrete highway section (milepost 101.51) on the north edge of Cody and extends 7.59 miles to the top of Skull Creek Hill (milepost 109.10).

The prime contractor is Riverside Contracting, Inc., of Missoula, Montana.

They are scheduled to resume work on Friday, placing some thermoplastic pavement markings.

"The contractor is also scheduled to start fog sealing the shoulders of the roadway and chip sealing the project on June 10," said Wyoming Department of Transportation Resident Engineer Todd Frost of Cody.

Frost said work should take about a week and is dependent upon favorable weather.

"Motorists should expect delays up to 20 minutes during traffic sealing and fog sealing. Traffic will be controlled with flaggers and a pilot car," he said.

The WY120 project consists of shoulder flattening with pit run gravel base, and placement of a 1-inch hot plant pavement leveling course, a 2-inch pavement overlay, and a chip seal finish. All work, except the fog seal and chip seal, was completed last fall.

Contract completion date is June 30.

ROLLOVER RESULTS IN NO INJURIES

A Powell teen escaped injury after rolling her 2006 Honda in the Willwood area around 5:15 p.m. Friday. The 16-year-old told the Park County Sheriff's Office that she had been driving east on Lane 14 when she briefly looked to her left and drifted into a borrow ditch. 'She then overcorrected, slid sideways and ended up in the [borrow] ditch upside down,' said Lance Mathess, a spokesman for the sheriff's office. Mathess said the teen was wearing her seat belt. Members of the Powell Volunteer Fire Department flipped the Honda upright and the vehicle was then able to be driven away. No citations were issued. Tribune photo by Kevin Killough

DISTRICT COURT

Charges reaching the court are only allegations and the defendants are presumed to be innocent. Counts are felonies unless otherwise noted.

CHARGES REACHING THE COURT

- Kasey C. Guenther, born 1989, of Casper, charged with burglary.
- Vincente J. Padilla, born 1954, of Powell, charged with burglary.
- Sara Daniella Sanchez, born 1994, of Powell, charged with conspiring to deliver a controlled substance (methamphetamine).

SENTENCES

- Elizabeth M. Boluyt, born 1986, of Powell, served 112 days in jail, must serve five years of supervised probation and pay $300 for allowing a child to remain in a vehicle where methamphetamine was stored.
- Peter E. Ferfes II, born 1982, of Powell, served one day in jail, must pay $1,000 for a misdemeanor count of interfering with an emergency call. A count of strangulation of a household member and a misdemeanor count of domestic battery were dismissed.
- Shane N. A. Golston, born 1984, must serve three to five years in prison, pay $470 to the court and $523.09 in restitution for one count of delivering heroin and another of delivering methamphetamine. Another count of delivering heroin was dismissed. The sentence will be served in conjunction with a Big Horn County case.
- Christina L. Lackman, born 1993, of Powell, served 75 days in jail, must serve five years of supervised probation and pay $325 to the court and $280 in restitution for delivering methamphetamine. Another count of delivering methamphetamine was dismissed.
- Valorie Lamb-Harlan, born

1973, of Powell, served 413 days in jail, must serve three years of supervised probation and pay $815 to the court and $2,292 in restitution for four counts of burglary, in four separate cases. One of the counts of burglary was reduced from an original count of aggravated burglary. Three misdemeanor counts of property destruction and three misdemeanor counts of theft were dismissed.

- Thomas E. Larson, born 1991, of Powell, served one day in jail, must serve one year of unsupervised probation and pay $600 to the court and $446.50 in restitution for misdemeanor counts of reckless endangering, property destruction totaling less than $1,000 and breach of peace. The reckless endangering charge was reduced from an original felony count of aggravated assault.
- Mark Moore, born 1988, of Basin, served 88 days in jail, must serve five years of supervised probation and pay $325 for endangering children, by allowing them to remain in an area where methamphetamine is possessed, stored or ingested.
- Kirk A. Ohman, born 1992, of Powell, served 188 days in jail, must serve four years supervised probation and pay $325 for possessing a controlled substance for a third or subsequent time.
- Ryan L. Roemmich, born 1981, of Cody, must serve six months of unsupervised probation and pay $250 to the court and $1,152.90 in restitution for a misdemeanor count of property destruction totaling less than $1,000. That was reduced from an original count of property destruction totaling $1,000 or more.
- Chastyn D. Royer, born 2000, of Cody, must serve three to five years in prison and pay $425 for possessing marijuana and Xanax with intent to deliver them. The judge recommended that Royer serve his sentence in the Wyoming Boot Camp program for youthful offenders. Counts of possessing MDMA and Ad-derall with intent to deliver them and misdemeanor counts of using amphetamine, methamphetamine and MDMA were dismissed.
- Adam Lee Thompson, born 1977, of Cody, served 35 days in jail, must serve six months unsupervised probation and pay $450 for driving with a suspended license and using a controlled substance. A count of driving while under the influence of alcohol for a fourth time in 10 years was dismissed for insufficient evidence; a misdemeanor count of driving without a required ignition interlock device was also dismissed.

- Heather Heater, born 1990, of Powell, previous probation revoked (fourth revocation), must serve five years of supervised probation for delivering hydrocodone, or possessing it with intent to deliver. Heater has served 350 days in jail.
- Chad L. Jones, born 1966, of Cody, previous probation revoked, must complete the Park County Treatment Court Program and serve three years of supervised probation on a count - of possessing a controlled substance (marijuana) for a third or subsequent time.

- Sarah Jean Thunder, born 1984, of Sheridan, previous probation revoked (second revocation), must serve six years of supervised probation, starting with intensive supervised probation, on a conviction of possessing methamphetamine with intent to deliver. Thunder has served 150 days in jail in the case.

CRIMINAL CONTEMPT OF COURT
(neither a felony nor misdemeanor)

- Matthew R. Stevens, born 1981, of Powell, found in contempt of court for failing to comply with conditions in four child neglect cases.

Cheyenne Mayor Orr accuses Gov. Gordon of throwing 'tantrum'

BY RAMSEY SCOTT
Wyoming Tribune Eagle
Via Wyoming News Exchange

The mayor of Cheyenne and the governor engaged in a public dispute Monday over what happened Friday during a contentious meeting about a potential Taiwanese state visit.

In a news release, Mayor Marian Orr accused Gov. Mark Gordon of going on a "profane misogynistic temper tantrum" directed at her. Orr said she decided to come forward to make sure actions like his would not be tolerated.

In his own statement, Gordon denied he tried to intimidate Orr and took offense to being called misogynistic. He admitted to using inappropriate language, but said he never stood up in a threatening manner, and his record of respecting women was well known.

MARIAN ORR

SHE SAID/HE SAID
Orr claims that Gordon — in front of three of his staff members — used foul language and threatening and intimidating behavior, and claimed the incident was an example of a misogynistic attitude held by Gordon.

"It's one thing to have a disagreement on an issue," Orr said in a statement. "But to lose your temper in front of your own staff, slam your fists on the table, get in someone's face, and yell 'f— you' because you don't like the way the discussion is going is abominable."

She added that Gordon "is much larger than I, and used his physical presence in an aggressive and threatening manner."

In a follow-up interview, Orr said the confrontation occurred about two-thirds of the way through the 30-minute meeting. Orr said her first thought was to stand up and walk out, but she stayed through the remainder of the meeting, which she described as ending on a positive note.

Orr said she would have not endorsed Gordon in his bid for the governor's office last November if she knew this is how he'd behave.

In his response, Gordon said Orr completely mischaracterized the Friday incident. But he did apologize for the language he used.

"I am deeply offended by the mischaracterization represented in the mayor's description of our meeting Friday. At no time during the conversation was I standing up or using intimidating body language," Gordon said in the statement. "The notion that I have anything but the utmost respect for women is simply not true. I stand by my record on that point. I am not proud of my language, and I apologize for the word I used."

Gordon's office later said the governor called Orr and apologized for his language, and she accepted his apology.

However, after reading Gordon's denial of any physically threatening actions toward her, Orr said she could no longer accept his apology for the use of profanity.

"[I accepted his apology] before I read his statement, which I believe it's not truthful as far as the physical nature of that conversation," Orr said.

Orr had no city staff members with her in the room. Three members of Gordon's administration were in the room during the meeting: Wyoming Homeland Security Director Lynn Budd, budget adviser Erica Legerski and senior policy adviser Renny MacKay. Both Budd and MacKay told the Wyoming Tribune Eagle they didn't agree with Orr's characterization of Gordon's actions.

Gordon was extremely frustrated and used profanity in the discussion, but Budd said Orr's description of the meeting was inaccurate.

"The governor was very frustrated, but it was not my opinion that he was aggressive with her at all," Budd said. "As far as I recall, he never stood up. He may have slapped the table. He never stood up or acted physically aggressive toward her."

MacKay agreed with Budd's assessment and said Gordon never stood up during the contentious meeting, and the meeting ended amicably.

"For sure there was a tense back and forth, but the governor never stood up," MacKay said. "There was table between the governor and the mayor, and he was always in the chair. And by the end of the meeting, it ended pretty civilly, and afterward I had a good conversation with the mayor to plan the next steps."

WHAT THE MEETING WAS ABOUT

The contentious meeting was about the potential of an official state visit from Taiwan's president during Cheyenne Frontier Days in July.

Wyoming and Cheyenne have ongoing relationships with both Taiwan and China. Cheyenne's sister city is the second-largest city in Taiwan, Taichung, and a delegation from Wyoming's Legislature and its business community traveled last year to Taiwan as part of a trade mission with the country.

State lawmakers have also taken trips to China as part of efforts to expand exports to the country, including coal.

Orr said in conversations with her counterparts in Taiwan, she's always extended invitations to CFD. When members of the Taiwanese administration expressed interest in coming to Cheyenne for this year's event, she jumped at the chance to make it happen.

According to Orr, the Taiwanese administration liked the fact that the president of Taiwan, Tsai Ing-wen, was the first woman elected head of state from the country and Orr was the first woman elected mayor of Wyoming's capital city.

Orr said Gordon told her during Friday's meeting there was no need for her or her office to be involved in any potential discussions.

"I was expecting it was going to be a dialogue on how we could both work together and combine efforts. It would take a lot of effort to host them," Orr said. "I found resistance to the idea, and essentially I was having to explain my position that it would be fantastic for the city, for the state, for tourism."

After conversations with Orr, the Taiwanese government reached out to Gordon and his staff about 10 days ago about the potential for an official state visit, MacKay said. The governor's office and the mayor's office had not been in communications about the potential visit before last week.

MacKay said the magnitude of an official state visit from Taiwan's government goes beyond just the security and logistics involved in hosting foreign leaders. There are potential ramifications for Wyoming's trade with both China and Taiwan, whether that's cattle or coal, as well as national security implications.

Taiwan and China have been at odds over the island nation's independence since the end of World War II, when the government of Chiang Kai-shek fled the communist forces of Mao Zedong and set up a government in Taiwan. China sees the island as a province that's been in revolt since 1949.

The long and controversial history of the two, and the potential for blowback from either group onto Wyoming or the United States, is why the governor's office has reached out to the U.S. State Department, MacKay said.

"The governor wants to proceed with diligence to make sure it's done right, and we don't have this answer yet," MacKay said. "That's part of what the office is dealing with, making sure we get answers and what's required from the governor, the State of Wyoming, the City of Cheyenne, and what are the implications for the state's economy and implications nationally for this kind of visit."

MacKay said once the state gets answers from the State Department, it would decide on the next steps.

Explore Peru during spring 2020 field studies trip

TRIP TRACES SPAIN'S INFLUENCE TO THE MODERN DAY

Area residents are invited to join Northwest College Intercultural Programs on a nine-day excursion to Peru in March 2020.

Led by NWC Intercultural Program Manager Amanda Enriquez, travelers will explore Peru, visit its energetic capital of Lima and trace Spain's influence to the modern day. The group will depart from Billings March 7 and return March 15.

After flying to Peru and meeting the tour director, travelers will take a guided tour of Lima with a local expert. Participants can expect to see Government Palace, Archbishop's Palace, City Hall, the Cathedral of Lima, the Larco Museum and the San Francisco Monastery. In addition, the group will take a walking tour of Miraflores. Travelers will also have the option of partaking in a ceviche cooking class.

Day three continues with exploration of Cuzco, a tour of the Korikancha Temple with an expert local guide and dinner in the Sacred Valley.

The next day, the group will have the opportunity to further explore the Sacred Valley by experiencing a Peruvian weaving demonstration, visiting the Maras salt ponds and touring Ollantaytambo with a guide.

The group will then travel by train to Aguas Calientes and Machu Picchu to enjoy a tour and dinner.

Day six of the excursion continues with a train ride to Ollantaytambo and Pisac to Cuzco, where travelers will visit the Pablo Seminario, the Indian Market in Pisac and the Sacsayhuaman Fortress.

The trip begins to wrap up on day seven, with exploration of Cuzco and the chance to experience a local community program.

The group will fly to Lima on day eight and board either an overnight or early morning flight home.

Total cost for the trip per person is $4,040 (or $439 per month), which includes round-trip airfare, accommodations, on-tour transportation, regional-style meals, curriculum integration, a full-time tour director, expert local guides and entrance to prominent sightseeing destinations.

Disruption: Police found Larson's vehicle a couple blocks from hospital

That's where Larson was when Powell Police Sgt. Chad Miner arrived and forced the door open.

"When it opened, the man [Larson] jumped out from behind the door, screamed at me and he was holding a pipe or metal object in both hands," Miner testified at a preliminary hearing; the officer also said in an affidavit that "I was certain he [Larson] was about to strike me."

Miner used a palm strike to knock Larson to the floor — with some drywall and blinds broken in the process — "at which point he gave up," the officer said.

A portable breath test later estimated Larson's blood alcohol content at around 0.21 percent, which is well over two times the point at which someone is considered too drunk to drive.

"He was quite intoxicated and none of the statements he made made any sense of any kind," Miner said in court. "He didn't know where he was, he didn't know how he got there. He didn't know what he was doing there."

Police later found Larson's Toyota RAV4 parked in an alley on Shoshone Street, a couple blocks away from the hospital.

A resident there told police that he'd been followed home by the RAV4 around midnight. A male — suspected to be Larson — then reportedly got out of the vehicle and confronted the resident, asking, "Do you know me?"

"[The resident] stated he chased the male off and didn't know where he went," Officer David Ferguson wrote in a report on the incident.

It was a few hours later that Larson was arrested at the nearby hospital.

As part of his year-long probationary period, Larson must obey the law, abstain from alcohol and stay out of bars.

County prosecutors had run into some difficulties with the case: In February, Circuit Court Judge Bruce Waters threw out the original aggravated assault charge; he ruled that the state didn't have enough evidence to show that Larson had attempted to cause bodily injury with a drawn deadly weapon (the metal IV stand). Miles argued during the preliminary hearing that, "There was no testimony that Mr. Larson did anything with that metal rod."

Judge Waters did allow prosecutors to refile the aggravated assault charge under a different subsection of the law — finding there was enough evidence to allege that Larson had threatened to use a drawn deadly weapon.

However, Miles said that in her review of all the materials, "the facts and circumstances of the case were better suited to the amended charge [of reckless endangerment] than they were to the original aggravated assault."

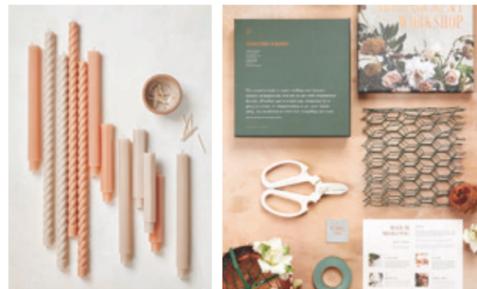

She added that, "I think the affidavit [used to support the charges] made it sound worse."

Court documents and police records show Sgt. Miner had recommended that prosecutors also charge Larson with a felony count of assaulting a peace officer, but the county attorney's office did not do so. Deputy Park County Attorney Mike Greenwood declined to comment on the case.

PIONEERS SPLIT DOUBLEHEADER WITH HALOS

MEYER, QUEEN STRONG ON THE PITCHER'S MOUND

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

The Powell Pioneers Legion A baseball team returned to action Monday afternoon, splitting a home day/night doubleheader with the visiting Emmanuel Halos from Billings.

Holding a 5-3 lead late in the opener, the Pioneers' pitching fell apart in the top of the seventh, allowing the Halos to plate four runs in a 7-5 comeback win.

Not to be outdone, and realizing the first game had been theirs to lose, Powell settled in for the second game and controlled the action throughout. Starter Colin Queen gave up just four hits and struck out 15, while Landon Sessions went 3-for-4 at the plate and drove in three runs in a 7-1 win.

"It was a good day for us, but I definitely would have liked to have two wins," said Pioneers manager Joe Cates. "But things happened in that first game and we gave it away in that last inning."

HALOS 7, PIONEERS 5

Ryley Meyer got the start on the hill for the Pioneers in the first game, in search of his first win in three attempts. After giving up a run in the first, Meyer settled in for another solid outing, giving up just two more runs over the next five innings.

"Ryley threw great for us," Cates said. "That's his third straight outing where he's thrown pretty well. He battled all night long, but had three errors behind him — that would have taken away a couple of the runs he gave up. But for the most part, he threw strikes. He'll get a win, hopefully sooner than later."

The Pioneers answered the Halos'

Billings Halo Hunter Morse (No. 20) slides safely back to second ahead of a pick-off throw to Pioneers shortstop Nate Brown Monday at Ed Lynn Memorial Field. run in the first with one of their own. After Queen doubled, Cameron Schmidt reached first on an error and Queen advanced to third. Schmidt was thrown out stealing second, but a miscue by the Halos' second baseman allowed an alert Queen to score from third, tying the game at 1-1.

Meyer went to work in the top of the second, retiring the first three batters, two by strikeout. The Pioneers kept the bats hot in the bottom of the second: A pair of singles by Sessions

'We hit pretty well; the wind was in our favor a little bit there. I still think we could have done better with the bats, but it's coming along.'

Joe Cates, manager and Noah Blough put runners on first and second with one out. Sessions was caught stealing third, but Nate Brown was hit by a pitch to keep two on with two outs. Kobe Ostermiller drove a single to left, scoring Blough and moving Brown to third; Queen singled for his second hit of the game, knocking in Brown and Ostermiller to make it a 4-1 game

"We hit pretty well; the wind was in our favor a little bit there," Cates said. "I still think we could have done better with the bats, but it's coming along."

The Halos plated two runs in the top of the third to pull within 4-3. Powell scored once more in the bottom of the fifth, when Queen singled and scored on a sacrifice by Meyer to push the lead to 5-3.

With one out in the top of the sixth, Meyer was pulled in favor of Cameron Wentz, who retired the next two batters to end the inning. Trouble came in the top of the seventh, however.

After getting the first batter out, Wentz gave up a single and a walk. The Halos' Josiah Shaw then tripled, clearing the bases and tying the game at 5-5.

The Halos scored twice more, taking the lead for the first time since the first inning at 7-5, and that's where the score would stay.

"Wentz came in in the sixth inning and got those two outs, and he was looking good," Cates said. "That seventh inning comes around, and he struggled a bit. He'll probably start on Wednesday, so we'll keep getting him in there."

The Pioneers finished the game with eight hits, led by a 3-for-4, 2 RBI performance by Queen. Ostermiller, Schmidt, Garrett Stutzman, Sessions and Blough added a hit apiece, with Ostermiller and Meyer each knocking in a run.

Meyer gave up three runs on five hits while striking out five in five innings. Wentz gave up four runs on three hits in

Northwest Trappers send six cowboys to CNFR

MCMILLAN A FAVORITE IN THE MEN'S ALL-AROUND COMPETITION

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

After a busy spring that saw the Northwest College men's rodeo team win the Big Sky Region by the slimmest of margins over Montana State University, the Trappers have qualified six cowboys for the College National Finals Rodeo in Casper next week.

"That was a little nerve-racking," NWC head coach Del Nose said of the Trappers' 6,100 to 6,011 point differential over MSU to win the Big Sky. "I thought we lost it by 30, and we ended up winning by 89. It came down to the final rodeo for us."

With the regular season in the books, the Trappers qualified six for the CNFR, including Caleb McMillan (all-around), Clancy Glenn (saddle bronc), Will Griffel (tie down, team roping), Colten Fisher (team roping), Justin Ketzenberg (bull riding) and Keaton Martz (bull riding, team roping).

Also scheduled to compete in his third CNFR is Powell native Bryce Bott, who qualified in tie down roping for Montana State. A 4.0 student, Bott graduated MSU in May and was selected as the 2019 MSU Agricultural Student of the Year. His first two CNFRs were as a member of the Casper College rodeo team.

McMillan won the men's all-around in the Big Sky Region, and heads into the CNFR ranked No. 1 in the nation. Glenn was fourth in the Big Sky in saddle bronc, while Ketzenberg and Martz finished third and fifth in bull riding, respectively. The team of Griffel and Fisher was second in team roping.

Expectations are high for the team heading into the CNFR, and Nose said everyone is healthy and excited to get started. As a coach, however, Nose said he'll stay cautiously optimistic; he knows from experience that anything can happen, and usually does.

"Everyone's doing pretty good and feeling pretty healthy," he said. "The deal is, the last time I had this good of a team, we went in there thinking we were going to go in and kick [butt] and

Victoria's School of Dance shines at Montana's Big Sky State Games

SUMMER RECITAL SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY

BY DON COGGER
Tribune Sports Editor

Six dancers from Victoria's School of Dance in Powell cleaned up at the Big Sky State Games recently, bringing home 10 medals in a variety of categories.

The Big Sky State Games are an Olympic-style amateur sports festival for people of all ages and abilities who reside in Montana, according to the event's website. Residents in bordering states are invited to participate in a variety of different sporting events, including dance.

The six competitors from Powell, ranging in age from 8 to 14, danced in a variety of styles and won eight medals total: Seven gold, two silver and one bronze. They were one of two dance schools from Wyoming to compete in the games; the other was the Absaroka Mountain Range clogging team from Powell, which won the gold in the International Folk category (see a future Tribune story for further details). There were 28 dance studios competing in this year's event.

"The way the competition works is they compete by category: Tap, jazz, ballet, hip-hop, all within their age bracket," explained Victoria Danovsky, owner of Victoria's School of Dance. "In the jazz category, for instance, the girls won first, second and third place, taking the sweep in that category."

The school will also hold its summer recital this Saturday. The event is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. at the Powell High School gym; tickets are $8, with kids 5 and under free, and can be bought at the door. The showcase will feature all 34 students at the school.

"Basically how the dance recital works is they start at the beginning of the school year in September, and in June we put a big showcase on," said Danovsky, now in her 29th year as a dance instructor and her 10th in Powell. "We do all the different styles of dance: Tap, jazz, lyrical, modern, hip-hop, the whole variety of dances. The ages range from 3 to 15."

The theme for this year's showcase is "Broadway

WEEK 6 JUNE 4, 2019

GAME OF THE WEEK: 1 NET SCORE ON PAR 5S, 2 NET SCORES ON PAR 4S AND 3 NET SCORES ON PAR 3S.

Week six of the Good Old Boys golf league is in the books, with teams of golfers taking one net score on par 5s, two net scores on par 4s and three net scores on par 3s.

Team No. 1, consisting of James Caffro, Larry Hedderman, Lee Madsen and Ken Rochlitz, finished first with a score of 106.

In second place with a team score of 109 was the team of Kevin Lineback, Clark Jeffs, Ray Nelson and Paul Devoss.

Drawing two players from other teams were Marc Saylor, Dave Frost, Hedderman and Gerry Johns; they finished third, carding a 111.

In fourth place with a score of 112 was the team of Jim Tobin, Bob Mason, Cliff Franklin and Steve Burtoft.

The team of Jerry Linsdau, Buddy Rae, Jerry Scheafer and Johns carded a 114, good for fifth place, while Dennis McCollum, Mike Hernandez, Dave Bonner and Lloyd Snyder finished sixth with a score of 115.

There were two deuces carded, one by Johns and the other by Burtoft. There were two payouts for the low net: Tobin and Hernandez with 67. Low gross was Dave Frost at 78.

relief, taking the loss.

PIONEERS 7, HALOS 1
The nightcap between the Pioneers and the Halos began as a pitcher's duel, with the game scoreless through the first 3 1/2 innings. The top of the first, however, had the Powell manager wondering if Queen was in for an off night, after he walked the first two batters.

"In the first inning, I was like, 'gah, he kinda looks ugly.' I was wondering who I was going to have to get warmed up," Cates said, adding, "He was going full count, his curveball was missing up. He wasn't throwing terrible, he was just off."

But with two on and no outs, Queen settled in, striking out the side to end the inning. He then retired nine of the next 13 batters he faced — striking out seven.

"He [Queen] found a way to battle without having his best stuff," Cates said. "And by the end of the game, he still struck out 15. It was good."

The Pioneers finally got on the board in the bottom of the fourth, when Schmidt scored on a Sessions single. The Halos answered in the top of the fifth, tying the game at 1 on a passed ball.

Powell retook the lead in the bottom of the fifth, when Ostermiller scored on an error. With the score 2-1, Sessions drove in his second run of the night, scoring Ashton Brewer, and the inning ended with the Pioneers leading 3-1.

After a three up-three down top of the sixth, the Pioneers added to their lead in the bottom of the inning, plating four more runs. Stutzman started things off with a single to center, followed by a Wentz sacrifice. Zane Cordes then walked and Ostermiller singled on a fly ball to center — scoring Stutzman and putting Cordes on second. Queen walked to load the bases, and with two outs following a fielder's choice, Brewer hit a grounder that the Halos' shortstop couldn't handle. That scored Ostermiller and Queen. Sessions then singled for his third hit of the night, scoring Brewer to push the lead to 7-1.

"Landon Sessions has been doing really good for us; he's really picked it up," Cates said. "His ability to step in and pick it up quick is good to see and his at-bats keep getting better. He did exactly what he needed to do. He waited, he was patient — he wasn't chasing pitches. He took what came to him and got the job done."

Powell's Nate Brown came in to pitch the top of the seventh, and retired all three batters he faced, striking out two to clinch the 7-1 win.

Until that point, Brown had been playing shortstop, a position usually held by his brother Jesse, who was out sick.

"That doesn't happen very often, but he [Nate Brown] did OK," Cates said.

Sessions led the charge at the plate for the Pioneers, going 3-for-4 with 3 RBIs. Stutzman collected a pair of hits and is hitting the ball well, according to Cates.

"He [Stutzman] flew out deep to left, and he crushed a ball down the third base line," he said. "His last at-bat, he squares one up the middle for another single. Those might have been the three hardest balls hit all night."

Ostermiller and Brown had a hit apiece, with lead-off hitter Ostermiller driving in a run.

"He [Ostermiller] is aggressive enough to where he's not going to watch a lot of good pitches down the middle," Cates said. "And when he gets on, he's got such good speed that there's not much I can't do with him. He scored from first base on a bunt-and-run — not something you see often."

Queen picked up his second win of the season with his 15-strikeout performance.

The Pioneers were at home again Wednesday afternoon for a rematch with the 406 Flyers. The team opens conference play on the road Saturday, with a doubleheader scheduled at Riverton.

Dance: Head to New York in July

Bound," a story about dancers who are traveling across the country to New York. Part of the reason Danovsky and her students chose that theme is that a group of 10 Powell dancers are heading to New York in July to perform in Times Square as part of the program "Dance the World Broadway."

"After the performance in Times Square, the girls will perform in a Broadway theatre, and will also see a Broadway show," Danovsky said. "They also get to go on a dinner cruise with some of the 'Dancing With the Stars' company. They'll be amongst kids from Canada, the US and Mexico that will all come together for one big performance in Times Square."

Danovsky said the group of girls heading to New York are always excited to dance and are methodical in their approach when it comes to events and competitions.

"The group of girls I have, they're just simply excited to dance," she said. "They build calendars and count down to which events are coming up. They're just all around excited to be dancing, so I'm not sure what I could pinpoint for what they're excited about the most. They just love it all."

The school's main competition team practices Monday through Friday, often 2 1/2 to 3 hours a day. Danovsky said the level of commitment the group shows to their craft, many from a young age, is impressive.

"Most of the girls started out as preschoolers and have come up through the ranks," she said. "It's been really neat to watch them grow and change. I look at my preschoolers now and think, 'OK, one day that's going to be them too.'" take names. It ended up being a very humbling experience, where instead of winning first we placed fourth."

"I don't want to speculate," Nose said of how the team will perform this year. "If these guys have a good rodeo and good rounds, they'll do good. But there are a lot of variables there. We'll just see what happens."

As a favorite in the all-around, McMillan is going to have his work cut out for him, especially in the bull riding, according to Nose.

"Bull riding is going to be tough. Their bulls are rank,"

Nose said. "But I got Will [Griffel] and Colten [Fisher], and we hope the right ones show up, that they can rope good and do good. Clancy [Glenn], he's a diamond in the rough, and the two bull riders and Martz] will be on the same page. If they get tapped, they're gonna ride."

At Nose's insistence, all six of the Trappers have been competing in amateur rodeos since the semester ended in a competitive edge.

"I told those guys to get to those rodeos, all the competitive events you can get to," he said. "You want to keep sharp. And hopefully, they'll be down here in the next day or two and rope some steers and get on some bulls at the Cody Nite Rodeo."

NWC has never had an all-around national champion, and Nose would like to see that change with McMillan. It will be the second time in as many years that McMillan has entered the CNFR ranked first in the all-around.

"He [McMillan] was ranked first in the nation last year, then he had some tough luck and broke some barriers in the calf roping, and that cost him his all-around bid," Nose said. "In the bull riding, he rode one out of four, and that ain't going to help him any. But it's a new year, and he's going in strong in bull riding, broncs and calf roping."

The CNFR begins Sunday and continues until Saturday, June 15 at the Events Center in Casper.

PUBLIC NOTICES

"BECAUSE THE PEOPLE MUST KNOW"

Gas increase

PUBLIC NOTICE

Pursuant to the Wyoming Administrative Procedure Act and the Wyoming Public Service Commission's (Commission) Procedural Rules and Special Regulations, notice is hereby given of the application of Montana-Dakota Utilities Co. (MDU or the Company) for a general natural gas service rate increase of $1,052,167 or 6.96 percent per year. MDU is also requesting approval of changes to its tariffs.

MDU is a public utility as defined in Wyo. Stat. § 37-1-101(a)(vi)(D), providing natural gas public utility service under certificates of public convenience and necessity issued by the Commission. MDU is subject to the Commission's jurisdiction under Wyo. Stat. § 37-2-112.

The Company's principal place of business is located in Bismarck, North Dakota. MDU provides natural gas utility service to approximately 19,059 customers in Wyoming.

MDU filed its Application on May 24, 2019, together with exhibits and revised tariff sheets, requesting authority to increase its natural gas utility service rates approximately $1,052,167 per year or 6.96 percent. In the Application, MDU is requesting a 10.3% return on equity equating to an overall return of 7.754% on rate base. MDU requests that the increase be made effective upon the completion of Commission proceedings.

MDU states if the proposed rate requests are approved, the average residential natural gas customer using an average of 88 dekatherms (Dth) on an annual basis can expect an increase of $3.94 or 8.4% per month. Due to rate design and individual customer load factors and usage characteristics, the percentage rate change to individual customers within each rate schedule may be higher or lower than the average for the customer rate class or rate schedule. The impact on individual bills may vary from the proposed increase in rates. Further, the rates ultimately approved by the Commission on an individual customer class basis may be lower or greater than those being proposed by the Company. Customers interested in knowing exactly how the natural gas rate proposals would affect their actual bills should contact MDU.

In addition to the proposed changes in rates for natural gas service, MDU is also proposing certain revisions to its natural gas service tariffs to incorporate its proposed changes in its rates for service.

MDU states the rate increase proposed in its application is because its current rates do not reflect the cost of providing natural gas service to the Company's customers.

This is not a complete description of MDU's Application. MDU's Application is on file with the Commission at its offices located at 2515 Warren Avenue, in Cheyenne, Wyoming and at all MDU's Wyoming offices. The Application may be inspected by any interested person during regular business hours or at MDU's website: <http://www.montana-dakota.com/rates-and-services/rate-cases>.

Anyone desiring to file a statement, protest, intervention or to request a public hearing in these matters must so file, in writing, with the Commission, on or before June 28, 2019. The petition(s) shall set forth the grounds of the proposed intervention(s) or request(s) for hearing and the position and interest of the petitioner in these proceedings.

If you wish to intervene in these matters and/or request a public hearing which you will attend and you require reasonable accommodation for a disability, please contact the Wyoming Public Service Commission at (307) 777-7427 or write to them at 2515 Warren Avenue, Suite 300, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82002, to make arrangements. Communications impaired persons may also contact the Commission by accessing Wyoming Relay by dialing 711. Please mention Docket No. 30013-351-GR-19 (Record No. 15261) in your communications and contact us as soon as possible to help us serve you better.

The God of tomorrow

I write this Perspectives column from the table of my late father's house. About four months ago, my grandmother and my father, who both fearlessly loved the Lord, went to heaven suddenly the same week. We were in town to do the funeral for my grandmother, when my father suddenly was unable to breathe and passed away due to a mass in his lungs.

So, while many would find this to be a terrible week, I found it to be a week of grace, because even though death came twice that week, the Lord gave my family an amazing chance to love and say goodbye to both of them. I was happy to have had the last day with my father surrounded by family.

Yet, just as I praise God for this last day with my father, I also praise God for my father's Christian faith that he lovingly brought into the lives of my sisters and me. Because of the father that he was, I am the man I am today. Yet, I am here at his house to help my mother begin the long process of going through my father's belongings. For anyone who has ever journeyed through this process, you understand that it isn't only difficult, it is also very pleasant. Pleasant because you get a chance to remember the person that you loved so dearly. Pleasant because you feel reminded of the life that they lived. Pleasant because you get a chance to remember the person that you cherished.

Needless to say, this was a week filled with memory. Yet as this week progressed, I am reminded of the blessings and dangers of memory. Blessings because you get a chance to remember where you have come from, but dangerous if you let your past keep you from going on to what is next — a danger that sometimes humans all too often find themselves unknowingly participating in; being so nostalgic for what once was that you miss what is now to come.

Don't get me wrong, memories are great and must be a part of the journey because often in order to know where you are going you must know where you came from. I think of Israel and when God came to them to remind them of their rich history. But in the same breath of conversation, he told them to not hold onto the past because it was stopping them from what he was about to do.

Isaiah 43: 16-21, "This is what the Lord says — he who made a way through the sea, a path through the mighty waters, who drew out the chariots and horses, the army and reinforcements together, and they lay there, never to rise again, extinguished, snuffed out like a wick: Forget the former things; do not dwell on the past. See, I am doing a new thing! Now it springs up; do you not perceive it? I am making a way in the wilderness and streams in the wasteland. The wild animals honor me, the jackals and the owls, because I provide water in the wilderness and streams in the wasteland, to give drink to my people, my chosen, the people I formed for myself that they may proclaim my praise."

This passage is God coming to Israel to remind them that he is the God of both the yesterday miracle and the tomorrow miracle. But what he did in the yesterday miracle does not have to be the way he does the miracle today. In the past, he separated the water and pulled them back, but in the future, he is going to flood the waters and hydrate the land. God says this to Israel because he didn't want the blessing of the yesterday miracle stopping them from participating in the miracle of tomorrow.

God brings us this word because this is what humans do: We love the past so much that we don't want to leave the glory days of yesterday. But what if tomorrow is your next glory day, but you've missed it because you are too strongly holding onto yesterday? He brought the past up to them in this text, but only to use it to press them on into tomorrow.

This is what my father has meant to me this difficult week. To be grateful for what I had with my father, but to use his memory as fuel to press me forward into tomorrow. To fuel me to be a better man. To fuel me to leave a Christian legacy like this to my children and to press me on in the race toward heaven.

Friends of Powell, let's use yesterday's memory to press us on to a brighter tomorrow. Let us be grateful for what once was, but not let it stop us from what is next. Let it only serve as a reminder that God is the God of yesterday and today and let us not forget that he most certainly is the God of tomorrow.

Alter road hearing

PUBLIC NOTICE
To all to whom it may concern: The Board of County Commissioners of Park County have decided to proceed with the alteration of a public roadway (an alley) located within the Barrows Subdivision in Ralston, Wyoming as described herein. This Notice is being provided per the requirements of Wyoming State Statute § 24-3-110.

WHEREAS:
• A Petition to "alter" said public roadway (alley) was submitted by No. 5 Ralston Wyoming Property, LLC (Petitioner) dated March 14, 2019;
• Said petition was filed by the Petitioner in the office of the Park County Clerk in accordance with Wyoming State Statute § 24-3-110;
• Said Petition included the signatures of at least five (5) electors of the County residing within twenty-five miles of the road (Alley) proposed to be altered as required per the Statutes;
• Said road (alley) described in the Petition is a public road as indicated on the attached Exhibit A and is more particularly described as follows:

A 20 foot wide Alley (a dedicated public roadway) between Lots 19 and 20 of the Barrows Subdivision within Section 26 of Township 55 North, Range 100 West, 6th Principal Meridian, Park County, Wyoming.

• The Board of County Commissioners for Park County, Wyoming (BOCC) met on April 2, 2019 and reviewed the referenced petition for public road alteration. Upon review, Resolution 2019-13 was approved initiating procedures for alteration of the public roadway (alley) described herein. Resolution 2019-13 also established Brian Edwards, Park County Engineer, as "Viewer" in accordance with Wyoming State Statutes § 24-3-103 and 24-3-104.

• A Viewer's Report was presented to the BOCC on May 21, 2019. The Viewer recommended alteration of the subject roadway (alley) based on all available information. Said Viewer's Report is available for review on the Park County website at www.parkcounty.us or at the Park County Public Works Department Offices located at 1131 11th Street in Cody.

• The BOCC accepted the Viewer's recommendations and moved on May 21, 2019 to continue the alteration process for the subject road (alley).

NOW THEREFORE:
All objections thereto or claims for damages by reason thereof must be filed in writing with the Park County Clerk, before noon on the 8th day of July 2019 or such road (alley) will be altered without reference to such objections or claims for damages.

Educators honored with Wyoming Education Association awards

Powell High School teachers John Fabela and Wendy Smith recently received prestigious awards from the Wyoming Education Association (WEA). Retiring Northwest College professor of history Steve Thulin was awarded with the association's inaugural Higher Education award named in his honor.

Fabela, who teaches band and serves as the WEA's Northwest Region president, was recognized as an educator who exemplifies excellence in teaching. He was awarded the National Education Association Foundation for the Improvement of Education Award for Teaching Excellence sponsored by California Casualty — one of the nation's most prestigious honor for public education.

"This award recognizes educators statewide who shine in their schools, their communities, and their own learning," WEA said in a news release.

Fabela will join with awardees from across the nation at a gala celebration in Washington, D.C., in the coming year.

Smith, who teaches biology at PHS, was awarded the WEA Green Apple Award that celebrates members who contribute to environmental awareness. This award helps to strengthen the bond between education and the environment by bringing the efforts of teachers to the attention of the public and other educators. Smith received a grant from the National Education Association to help fund a vertical garden project at Powell High School that is both teaching students how to grow food and how to utilize that food through curriculum in the school's experimental kitchen. Smith's commitment to hands-on learning and engagement of students in the environment around them was applauded through this award.

Thulin, longtime faculty member at Northwest College and tireless advocate for the WEA, accepted the first-ever higher education award that was created in his honor. This award will be given in Thulin's name for the foreseeable future to WEA higher education members who exemplify his commitment to profession, students and association leadership.

"The WEA awards educators and friends of education each year that advocate for each other, the education profession, and their students," said WEA President Kathy Vetter. "We are so proud of this year's recipients and the work they do for students in Wyoming. Powell has a strong association presence that helps its students and educators to shine!"

The Wyoming Education Association has supported public education in the state for 125 years and represents more than 6,000 members statewide. To learn more about WEA, visit www.wyoea.org.
